"BIG BILL'S" BRIBERY STORY DENIED

POLICE ACT ON KELIHER CHARGES

WOMAN SLAYER IS FREED

Mrs. Elizabeth Power of Linn, who killed her drunken husband, William Power, last Saturday, was discharged in Lynn District court today after she had told Judge Lummus, with other officers and spectators listening spell-bound, how she had suffered from her husband's habits and abuse and just how she came to strike the fatal blows of a week ago.

The original murder charge had been reduced to manslaughter. But after Judge Lummus had heard the story of this wife—also mother of six children—and after he had said he believed no jury would convict her on the evidence, he discharged her.

"God bless you, Judge!" gasped Mrs. Power, and collapsed where she stood at the dock.

Carried from Court Room.

Mrs. Brazier, the police matron, who had assisted Mrs. Power into court, and a court officer, carried the unconscious woman out, while Judge Lummus suppressed the applause which the discharge of Mrs. Power had brought from spectators.

"No demonstration will be permitted," said the Judge.

But the spectators smiled and a buzz of commendation ran around the court room.

Fifteen Witnesses.

The defence brought fifteen witnesses down from Boston to testify to Power's abusive habits, but none of the fifteen was called to the stand.

Mrs. Power's own story, recited in a low, dispassionate voice to the judge, was enough.

The State had put in merely routine evidence of the death of Power. No oratory was wasted in trying to make out a case against the wife who had defended herself. Attorney James W. Sullivan, in summing up for his pathetic client, said he did not believe Mrs. Power any more to blame for her husband's death than the average automobilist who is brought into court after running over a person.

Attorney Sullivan added that the mother of six children, engaged also in running a boarding house, is not so situated as to run away. He thought the District Attorney could find her easy enough if a Grand Jury chose to indict her.

Judge Discharges Her.

Judge Lummus, in disposing of the case, said in part:

I think this man's condition was such as to justify resistance. He was a big man and his wife is a small, frail woman. It is difficult to determine just what force should be used in resistance. I don't believe any jury would convict on this evidence.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Cold wave warnings for the Atlantic States from New England southward to North Carolina were issued by the weather bureau today. According to the forecaster, the cold wave now over the Ohio, upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys and the upper lake region will move East and strike the Atlantic States tonight.

Temperature will range from below zero in New England and Northern New York to freezing in South Carolina, Georgia, Northern Florida and the East Gulf States. A temperature of fifteen degrees, the coldest of the year is predicted for Washington tonight. The forecaster says the cold wave will last for several days. The lowest temperature reported today was in Minnesota and North Dakota where the mercury stood twenty degrees below zero.

Iowa, Indiana and the Middle Western States generally reported temperatures below zero.

It is conceded that when Bear ground hog comes out tomorrow he'll go right back again and stay for a real Winter.

FIND MISS HOURIN IN NEW YORK

The wedding of Harry F. (Daddy) White of Waltham, athletic coach of Tilton Seminary at Tilton, N. H., and of sixteen-year old Katharine A. Hourin of Roxbury, who eloped from the seminary last Tuesday night, takes place in New York city this afternoon.

Dispatches from Manhattan today said that Magistrate Krotel dismissed a charge brought in the case, following the insistent declaration by the couple that all they wished was to get married in the shortest possible time.

"Don't let me interfere with your plans," said Jeremiah Hourin, father of the former seminary student.

The couple left court for City Hall, to obtain a license.

Bride Is Only Sixteen.

Miss Hourin was graduated from a Boston private school last June and then went to Tilton Seminary. She is a big girl for sixteen years.

At Tilton she met "Daddy" White, the athlete and instructor. He was captain of his high school team in Waltham. At Tilton he turned out a championship football team and a fast basketball squad.

Apparently the families of neither "Daddy" nor Miss Hourin suspected a romance. His mother said, after they left the seminary, that "Daddy" never spoke of Miss Hourin more than of any other of his athletic pupils.

Christopher D. A. Hourin of No. 1577 Columbus avenue, refused at first to credit the departure from Tilton.

10 NEAR DEATH AS ENGINE SMASHEES PASSENGER COACH

Ten passengers had a narrow escape from death in a collision on the Boston & Maine Railroad at South Lawrence at noon today. A freight train struck the third couch of a local passenger train which had spilt on misplaced switch. Both were going in the same direction on separate tracks.

The engine of the freight train hit the coach in the middle and threw the superstructure off the trucks and over on the opposite track. There were ten passengers in the coach at the time, but not one was even slightly injured.

The shoulder of Engineer Wadleigh of the freight train was sprained.

John Carroll, engineer of the passenger train, has no explanation to offer.

FATHER THREATENS TO RENOUNCE ETTOR

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 1.—Joseph J. Ettor, the strike leader, who was a central figure in the Lawrence, Mass., riots and subsequent trial at Salem for inciting murder, which resulted in his acquittal, has reached home. If he obeys his father he will stay here; if he does not, the elder Ettor will renounce him forever. He declared, after he had clasped his son in his arms, at the Union station.

$600,000,000 CHICAGO TRACTION COMBINE

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Mayor Harrison and the City Council have reached an agreement on the consolidation of the surface and elevated railroads of Chicago, the construction of a system of subways and the merger of all three.

This combination will represent $600,000,000 and in forty years the city will own the entire property.

KING GEORGE HAS A STUBBORN COLD

LONDON, Feb. 1.—King George is suffering from a stubborn cold, it was learned today, which is causing him annoyance. While no alarm is felt for the King's health, and while he is not kept from his duties of state, he is under the care of the court physician.

GARMENT STRIKE ON IN BOSTON

When the shops closed at noon today 5,000 women workers on men's garments walked out and the strike of the garment workers in Boston started.

The abrupt action of the workers has increased the unsettled condition in the general trade. A state of unrest now exists among the 12,000 members of the trade who labor on the garments for women and children.

One hundred and eighty shops are affected. The others are a few minor and non-union places.

It was thought that a settlement would be reached today, following the meeting of the joint executive board of the Boston United Garment Workers' Union with those employers who have made it known that they desired to sign the strike demands before the employes quit work. But no definite conclusion was reached.

Nearly a hundred shops closed at noon today and will not reopen on Monday morning. The other eighty shops will remain open, relying on employes who have not joined the union to keep things going.

Preparations for picket duty were initiated today. A general call for 2,000 pickets was made by the strike committee. The responses came quickly and enthusiastically. Hundreds of girls volunteered and were accepted for duty Monday morning. Strike headquarters has been established at No. 724 Washington street.

The local committee has received the formal approval of the International Union, but no financial assistance will be forthcoming, as the union needs over $1,000,000 for the New York strike.

The strike committee will make no attempt to meet the employers until they have shown their strength on the first day of the strike. They will, however, send letters to the various manufacturers detailing the demands of the strikers. The committee will attempt to secure Faneuil Hall for a mass meeting Monday night. It is anticipated that only about half of the men and women engaged in the strike will be able to gain admittance.

Devonian Is Nearing Halifax, Towing the Crippled S. S. Mexico

The Leyland liner Devonian, with the crippled steamer Mexico of the French line in tow, is slowly but safely nearing Halifax. A second wireless message received today from Captain Trant of the Devonian said they were only 200 miles from Halifax. At 9:30 yesterday morning, according to the first wireless, they were 1200 miles out, so half the distance has been covered.

Today's message added that Captain Trant expects to dock the Mexico at Halifax by Monday night, but they should arrive there before then.

The Mexico has fourteen passengers and a $1,000,000 cargo aboard. Losing a propellor in a gale, she became helpless and sent out "S. O. S." calls for aid. The Devonian, just out of Boston, answered the call. A large salvage is assured the Leyland line, shipping men say.

BLAZE IN ADVENT CHURCH RECTORY

A fire in the rectory of the Church of the Advent at No. 28 Brimmer street, the residence of Rev. W. H. van Allen at 9 o'clock this morning caused several hundred dollars damage. The blaze started in a closet connected with the laundry and the house soon became filled with smoke. The action of the church was phoned to the fire department at the Mt. Vernon street fire house around the corner, and the blaze was soon put out.

New York Authorities May Ask Foss to Let Keliher Testify There

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—District Attorney Whitman's police graft probe took a new turn today when he ordered an investigation into the story of William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher that more than $200,000 had been mulcted from George W. Coleman, a Cambridge, Mass., bank embezzler, in fake gambling games operated in this city under police protection.

Mr. Whitman said he would delegate one of his assistants to go to Boston and interview Keliher, and that if Keliher's charges against a certain New York police lieutenant, now retired, prove true, he will ask Governor Foss to allow Keliher, who is serving time in that State, to come to New York and testify before the Grand Jury.

Reports have been received at the District Attorney's office that fake gambling establishments are run here for the deecing of "easy marks" under protection of police officials, who get a big rake off.

Confederates Will March in Parade at the Inauguration

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—For the first time in history a band of armed Confederates will tramp down Pennsylvania avenue March 4, when a company of veterans will occupy a place of honor in the Wilson inaugural parade. Arrangements were made today for the old fighters.

They will wear their gray uniforms and will carry the rifles and side arms which they bore in the Civil War.

The Musgrove Club of Louisville, Ky., announces that it is coming in force and that it intends to bring its "Kentucky hospitality with it." At the same time arrangements were made for a place in the line for the Temperance Flower Drill League of Pittsburgh.

1,000 Mice to Rout Suffragettes in Big Parade at Capital

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Feminine hearts arranging the suffrage pageant March 3 were fluttering with fear today. A report that college students are planning to turn the petticoat parade into a wild rout by liberating 1,000 mice among the marchers was the cause.

At suffrage headquarters it was reported that the students are buying the rodents by the wholesale. It was said they planned to station mouse distributers at various points along Pennsylvania avenue, relying on German shepherd dogs to change the parade to a wild scramble for benches and trees.

To have a detail of cat carriers in the parade as a counter plot against the college prank was defeated today. Leading suffragettes, however, did not favor the reprisal plan, fearing that to have cats chase the mice would increase the excitement.

"This plan must be nipped in the bud," said Commissioner Rudolph regarding the mice invasion plot. It is all right for the boys to have fun, but this would be going too far."

CINCINNATI SENT TO AID CRIPPLED SHIP

EXPECT GOV. FOSS TO LET GAMBLER OUT TO BACK UP GRAFT TALE

District Attorney Whitman in New York this afternoon announced that he would ask Governor Foss to permit "Big Bill" Keliher to go to New York and testify against the New York police lieutenant to whom Keliher says he paid $50,000 during various years for police protection.

This official is no longer on the New York police force. He has retired, but he can be prosecuted. Keliher and Walsh took most of the Cambridge bank's money from Coleman in New York city.

So if Keliher's confession accomplishes nothing in Boston it may be the means of sending a New York police crook to jail.

The amazing statement by Keliher that four Boston men had robbed him of $73,000 for the purpose of "fixing the United States District Attorney's office, the Federal Jury," and finally officers of the court has been thoroughly investigated by the officials concerned in Boston and by officials higher up in the federal government than those in office in Boston and this statement of Keliher's is declared to be absolutely untrue.

NO FACTS TO BACK UP CHARGES.

Former Governor Bates, the receiver of the National City Bank of Cambridge, has carefully investigated all of Keliher's statements and he declares that there is no foundation for them or he would have brought suit for the recovery of the money.

The names of the four men who, Keliher pleges, got $73,000 from him, are known to the AMERICAN and to every other newspaper in Boston.

The AMERICAN has conducted an investigation of its own and can find no testimony to substantiate Keliher's statement.

According to Keliher, these men are lawyers and politicians of prominence. It would seem that Keliher's object in making the charges is revenge.

There is one man who might add dubious confirmation to the Keliher statement. He is Martin J. Walsh, Keliher's former partner and a criminal of world-wide fame. Walsh is supposed to be dead.

Nobody knows where he was born. None of his friends were at the funeral. He was last as though the earth had opened for him.

Keliher maintains that Receiver Bates by civil suits, should be able to recover $150,000 from Walsh's estate in addition to $73,000 of which Keliher says he was robbed by Boston men.

This would make a total of over $200,000 that Keliher says can be recovered by law.

It is well to remember that Keliher said that there is a very large sum in a safe deposit company in Boston. This statement Receiver Bates investigated and found untrue. There was no safety deposit box, much less money.

Keliher declares that a rich Boston contractor knows the facts and is willing to spend $100,000 to punish the men who "double-crossed" him. He does not say

500 FLEE AS LYNN BUILDING SAGS IN MIDDLE

Five hundred newspaper and shoe factory employes fled when all six floors in the six-story building at No. 27 Central avenue, Lynn, sagged two feet in the middle, following the collapse of the main supporting pillar in the basement. All got out safely.

When the first shock came and floors began to sink women and girls employed by the Murray Shoe Company on the five upper floors screamed and started to run blindly. Foremen calmed them so that they stopped to get their hats and coats and then left, hurriedly but not in a panic.

Elevator Boy a Hero.

William Fogarty, the elevator boy, ran the car four times to the top to take down the employes. Others came down on the freight elevator, running this car themselves. The rest hastened down the stairways.

The ground floor and basement of the building are occupied by the Lynn Telegram and the Polando Fruit Company. In putting in a new press recently the foundations were apparently weakened. At 9:30 today a basement pillar of brick, two feet thick, fell to pieces without warning, letting down the flooring in the middle. Heavy shoe machinery on the upper floors increased the pressure of the floorings' own weight.

Empty Building Quick.

The building was empty inside of five minutes. Mayor Newhall was going by at the time. He entered the place and inspected the basement. Building Inspector Bayard arrived and took charge. The work of jacking up the floorings was begun. Building Inspector Bayard said the foundations had evidently weakened, but he would not state the blame yet.

The damage has not been estimated, as it is not known yet whether costly shoe machinery has been wrecked by the floors being thrown out of true.

The Lynn Telegram was making up for its afternoon editions and preparing for its Sunday morning issue. The management declined offers of assistance from its Lynn contemporaries and made arrangements to "get out" its edition elsewhere.

"Stock Yards Special" Conductor Ran Down Notorious Bandits

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Conductor L. E. Smith, who pursued the bandit who robbed the express car of the "Stock Yards Special," was instrumental in running down the notorious car barn bandits Neidemier, Vandine and Roeske, several years ago, in the swamp lands near Liverpool, Ind.

Smith, who at that time was a conductor on the Pennsylvania, was taking his train on a siding, when he saw an engine with the three bandits aboard crash into a line of box cars.

Smith telephoned the police, and then, with a blacksmith trailed the robbers, who had committed many murders in Chicago and who that day killed two men, until Neidemeir and Vandine surrendered. Roeske was arrested in a station.

The "stock yards special" is used to carry money and valuable papers between the Union Stock yards and down-town banks. Last night a bandit robbed the safe of an express car and escaped with a bag of currency.

Efforts to find out the exact amount of money stolen revealed the fact that as high as $200,000 has been carried on the train.

Dr. von Holleben, Once Ambassador to U. S., Dies in Berlin

BERLIN, Feb. 1.—Dr. Theodor von Holleben, formerly German Ambassador at Washington, died here today, in his seventy-fifth year. He had been seriously ill for almost two weeks.

Dr. von Holleben, who had been in the German diplomatic service since 1872, served two terms at Washington, first as Minister, in 1891-2, and then as Ambassador, from 1897 to 1903.

Before becoming a diplomat he had been an officer in the Prussian Army and had fought in the war between France and Germany.

He held an honorary doctor's degree from Harvard University.

In his diplomatic career he served in Pekin and Tokio, in Buenos Ayres and in Stuttgart.

Here's a Co-Ed with a Perfect Foot, out of a Class of 340

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 1.—Miss Annette Sullivan of Sedalia, Mo., has a perfect foot. This fact was not discovered until a few days ago when University of Illinois coeds submitted to a foot examination. There were 340 contestants, and Miss Gertrude Monilon, instructor of physical training for women, was the examiner.

Miss Sullivan's was the only perfect foot found. It measured a fraction less than ten inches in length and something less than two inches across at the narrowest point.

First Break Comes Today for Boston in Price of Coal

One leading coal company makes a 25-cent reduction in all kinds of anthracite today. It is probable the reduction will be general. The continued mild weather, the fact that Winter is so nearly over and the general easing up in the stringency of coal supply are the causes named for the drop in prices.

At the offices of two other coal companies complete ignorance of the projected drop was professed, but the managers said that if any concern cuts its prices they should be obliged to follow suit.

Two Brockton Boys Confess to Firing Their School House

BROCKTON, Feb. 1.—Arthur Braley, aged twelve, and Louis Faux, nine, pupils at the Kingman Grammar School were arrested at noon today for setting fire to the school last Thursday. Both confessed.

They told the officers that they had seen some moving pictures in which some men fired a house and the police believe that the moving pictures are responsible for the act.

The fire was discovered shortly after 5 o'clock just after the janitor had left the building. An empty bottle, which had contained kerosene, some cotton waste and paper were found near the fire. The damage was slight. They will appear in court Monday.

Wollaston Church Committee All Stand By Pastor Ayers

The standing committee of the Park and Downs church of Wollaston found this afternoon the following reply to the committee of eleven citizens and members of the church who petitioned for the resignation of the Rev. William B. Ayers, the pastor. The statement is addressed to the signers of the petition and is as follows:

Your communication, with its enclosures, came under the full consideration of the Standing Committee of the Park and Downs Church.

They desire to state very clearly and finally, that the matters brought up in your communication have been previously examined into and the charges made in them found either to be unwarranted or satisfactorily explained by the facts of the case, and the committee unanimously reiterates its confidence in Rev. Mr. Ayers.

CHARLES A. RICHARDSON,
Clerk of the Church for the Standing Committee.

Eleven Against Pastor.

Eleven Wollaston people are circulating a petition seeking the resignation of Rev. Mr. Ayers. He is being sued for $25,000 by Chester A. Boynton of Revere for the alleged alienation of the affections of his wife, Mrs. Helen Willett Boynton. The petition comes almost on the eve of the trial of the suit, which is to begin next Wednesday in the Suffolk Superior Court.

Rev. Mr. Ayers is charged with "misstating his age" on several occasions. Exhibits filed with the petition include an alleged birth certificate of the pastor, alleged copies of records of the minister's graduation at Andover Theological Seminary, as a voter at Watertown, N. Y., and of Quincy and of the age he is said to have given when he took out a marriage certificate. The petition says:

Allege Ages Differ.

We call your attention to various statements of age as in his registration at Watertown, N. Y., in the year 1906, where the age is given as thirty-two; in his registration at Quincy, September 21, 1911, age given again as thirty-two; on his marriage certificate June 13, 1906, where the age is given as twenty-one years; on admission papers to Andover Theological Seminary in April, 1900, where the age is given as twenty-nine years. We submit the certificate of birth giving date of birth as September 8, 1884.

In view of these facts and also the conditions which exist in the church today, we pray that you take such action as may be necessary to secure the resignation of the present pastor, W. B. Ayers.

Church Defends Pastor.

The demand for the pastor's resignation is the result of friction and troubles which began nearly eighteen months ago. A year ago Rev. Mr. Ayers was tried before a "trial board" of the Suffolk South Conference of the Congregational ministers. His friends declared that he was fully vindicated. The minister, however, was placed under the "friendly supervision" of a committee of clergymen.

Mr. Boynton, the pastor's accuser in the alienation suit, was suspended from membership last Fall, at a meeting of the church. Later, at a special meeting of the congregation, the majority voted its implicit confidence in Rev. Mr. Ayers and its belief in his innocence.

It is expected the standing committee of the church will meet to discuss the petition and the charges. It is understood the committee is staunchly supporting the pastor against what the friends call the "attacks of his enemies."

CLINTON, Feb. 1.—The grit of James B. Tipping of Taunton, a brakeman on the New Haven road, in holding on to the iron step of a freight car may save his life. One leg was completely severed below the knee and the other so badly crushed, it had to be amputated at Clinton Hospital. Tipping has a chance to live.

MRS. POWER IS OVERCOME IN COURTROOM

I feel it my duty and within my power, regardless of what action the District Attorney may wish to take later, to discharge her.

Mrs. Power was brought over from Salem jail early today and was put in charge of Matron Brazier. Before court opened her counsel, Chief Burckes and Judge Fanning agreed on reducing the murder charge to manslaughter.

Mrs. Power was assisted into the courtroom and to a chair in the dock by the matron. She was pale and hollow-eyed and trembling, but she managed to collect herself. She rose and pleaded not guilty in a steady voice when Clerk Doherty read the complaint, charging her with manslaughter in causing the death of her husband, William Power, at their home, No. 927 Western avenue, Lynn, last Sunday.

Inspectors Thorn and Stacey Burckes, Dr. Thomas F. Grady, Medical Examiner Joseph G. Pinkham and lodgers at the Power lodging house testified to the death of Power, to the autopsy, the arrest of the wife and the bad habits of Power. Medical Examiner Pinkham said he thought Power might have been struck on the head more than once.

Tells Her Own Story.

Mrs. Power took the stand and began her pitiful story to Judge Lummus. She said in part:

I visited relatives in Charlestown last Saturday night. I returned to Lynn at 11 o'clock. I brought a bottle of whiskey with me. My husband had told me to get it for him.

The boarders sa..' he was drunk so I didn't give him it. I went to sleep in the kitchen. I...slept upstairs with two of the children.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock he called for Sammie, the oldest boy. Sammie was afraid to go upstairs to him, but I told him it would be all right.

The boy could hardly have reached the room when I heard my husband swearing and threatening to kill the child.

Tells Story of Fight.

I went up. I said to him: "For God's sake, don't swear at that little boy. The neighbors will hear you and it is Sunday morning." He turned on me suddenly and took up a bucket filled with dirty water. He tried to throw it on me, but spilled it on himself, on the bed and on the floor. Then he started toward me with the bucket raised above his head. He said he would put it over my head.

As he started to grab me I reached down under the baby's bed and picked up a stick of wood. I was so frightened I don't know what I did, but I remember I struck him over the head and pushed him on the bed.

I don't know whether I hit him after that or not. I might have. I was so hysterical I don't know just all I did do.

"I Didn't Mean to Kill Him."

I didn't mean to hurt my husband. I only meant to hit him enough to make him leave me and the children alone.

I ran into the hallway. Then I heard my husband breathing hard. I went back into the bedroom. I saw I must have hurt him badly. Then I got help.

Such was the burden of Mrs. Power's story. It was substantially the same, in regard to the fatal blows, as Mrs. Power told early in the week in her cell at Salem jail to Angela Morgan of the Boston AMERICAN. But this time Mrs. Power did not cry or wring her hands. She was dry-eyed and held herself well in hand.

It was only when she heard the judge order her discharged that her pent-up emotions and anxiety burst forth in her fainting cry of: "God bless you, Judge."

PELLETIER TO QUIZ CADY ON PRISON CHARGE

Rev. George Luther Cady of Dorchester, who it is alleged has charged that the officials of the state prison at Charlestown have been guilty of graft and maladministration will be called to the District Attorney's office Monday to tell what he knows of the charges that he is alleged to have made publicly.

District Attorney Pelletier has been informed of the public charges made by Rev. Dr. Cady and says that he will investigate the matter fully. He will hear all that Dr. Cady has to tell about his knowledge of the alleged wrongdoing at the state prison, and then decide what action should be taken.

Mr. Pelletier said today:

There are too many charges of graft and crookedness made about our public officials and institutions. It must stop. The charges that have been made for years past, have been without foundation and lead the public to believe that public institutions in Suffolk County are filled with graft.

If the Rev. Mr. Cady found graft and crookedness prevalent in the State Prison, he should have brought it to the attention of the proper authorities. I shall ask him to explain his charges and if necessary will summon him before the Grand Jury.

Charges of graft and crookedness against the State Prison, which is under the administration of General Bridges, who has been at the wheel for twenty years, should be proven or withdrawn. I shall dig to the bottom of these charges.

Mr. Cady should not make these charges unless he can bring proof positive that his charges are true and even then he should bring them to the attention of the authorities before making them broadcast from a public platform.

Telephone Girl's Blunder Caused Two Murders and Suicide

BUDAPEST, Feb. 1.—Police investigation today traced to the blunder of a girl telephone operator a triple tragedy which shocked the Hungarian capital.

Mme. Bela Gross, a married woman, arranged over the telephone a meeting with M. Feldlak, a prominent bank official of Budapest. Accidently the telephone operator switched in a third connection, and Neuberg, a laborer, heard their conversation.

Realizing that he might "cash in" on his information, Neuberg told Gross where he could find his wife and her companion, and when Gross came upon them, Mme. Gross and Feldlak killed themselves. Neuberg, too, made away with himself, leaving a note which said that he received $12.50 from Gross for his information that cost two lives.

SAYS CHEMISTS CAN MAKE BABES IN INCUBATORS

Scientists, biologists and economists discussed with zest today an assertion by Dr. Martin Kellogg Schermerhorn of Harvar that some time human beings will be made by chemists in "baby factories," just as chickens are now hatched in incubators.

The idea of a factory-made race furnished keen argument among the 1,64 science circles which are so large represented in Boston.

Some admitted the idea theoretically possible, but practically improbable.

Others said: "Why not, in time?"

Dr. Schermerhorn was formerly pastor of the Church of the Unity in Boston. He is now connected with the department of philosophy at Harvard. He is a noted student of psychological problems and has been for years one of the staff speakers at the New Thought and Theosophist conferences. Recently, he returned from a three-years' stay in England where he has pursued his favorite studies.

Baby Factory Statements.

He made his "baby factory" statements in course of a talk to the Metaphysical Club. In this connection he said:

Life is not confined to the animal and plant world. The whole universe is alive, and all that lives is conscious.

From the darting atom to the dancing star and the shining archangel, everything is pulsating with life, with consciousness, with activity. From notes to mountains we matter dances in the sunshine. Every atom moves rythmically, and remembers, loves and hates.

"Animals Have Power of Thought."

Animals are conscious and gifted with the power of thought and imagination, even though Roosevelt, who thinks himself a great hunter, says that they do not know when they are being brutally slaughtered.

Plants are conscious, and Ruskin and Goethe agree that they are capable of exercising strategy and forethought. Even Darwin states that plants are sensitive, and hence he must have believed that they are conscious.

Hence it is obvious that the evolution from so-called matter to human life is possible. The chemist of the future will labor so that men will be made in baby factories, as chickens are now hatched in incubators.

"BIG BILL" KELIHER'S OWN STORY OF HIS GAMBLING LIFE

CONFIDENCE MAN RECITES DAYS OF BOYHOOD AND LATER BUNCO DAYS.

Here is the life story of William J. (Big Bill) Keliher, told for the first time, from his boyhood days in Boston to his conviction as a confidence man.

Keliher wanted an opportunity to tell this story on the witness stand at his trial, but the plan to have him testify was given up. Here, for the first time, Keliher shows how he went into the fake faro game. He tells of his first victims—of all the others he figured or helped to figure. He tells just how much money he made in his bunco-steering career. He reveals the expenses of the game. Then he shows just where the money went—and how he is broke today.

By WILLIAM J. (BIG BILL) KELIHER.

I was born in a little village just outside of County Cork, Ireland, thirty-five years ago. When I was twelve years of age my uncle, a namesake who was a prosperous saloonkeeper in the South End, sent my folks enough money for my passage to Boston, with the assurance that he would provide a good home and educate me.

I was no different than any other greenhorn when I arrives in Boston, and when I was not in school I drove a team and delivered beer to the houses in the South End.

My cousins were in politics in Ward 9. They were constantly fighting for the supremacy of ward politics. My giant strength soon won me recognition in a political way and later some friends, attracted by my size and strength and natural athletic ability, had me entered as a special student in a local college where I was immediately drafted as a football player.

The notoriety that I obtained from playing football—I must confess that I was a victim of a good press agent rather than having the ability to play that game—turned my head and from that time on I never seemed to lose an opportunity to turn to the spectacular, even though some of my actions were not the most honorable.

For several years I worked as a bar-tender, and mixed a great deal in politics.

About four years ago I first met Martin Walsh. I cannot just recall now the incident. We were all together at Clark's Hotel, and the meeting was only a casual one. I saw more or less of him nightly in that hotel and other resorts around town. As I recall among the crowd that used to assemble at Clark's was Charlie Snow, Charlie Tillotte, Frank Draper, Fred Marshall (don't confuse him with Johnnie Marshall) and a score of other lesser lights. Ned McPherson and Martin Walsh were the big men of this crowd of card sharps and confidence men that made their headquarters in that hotel.

Enters Fake Faro Game.

As they sat around the table and told stories of fleecing wealthy men out of thousands on board the transatlantic liners, I began to think that I was a boob to be working when there was so much easy money lying around.

I went to Walsh and had a confidential chat with him. I told him of my extensive acquaintance among politicians, saloon-keepers and others who I could persuade to fall victims to any proposition that I put to them.

Just about that time Charlie Tillotte had a row with Walsh, and this was followed by a mix-up with Ned McPherson, who had been campaigning with Walsh in Europe.

Walsh said that it looked good for me to grub off a bunch of suckers and get a lot of money. The headquarters in No. 6 Beacon street were open and I went there by appointment with Walsh, who carefully outlined the story of the faro-bank swindle. I need admit that it was with some trepidation that I approached my first intended victim.

He was a dentist with offices in a building in Boylston street near Berkeley. I was too anxious; I painted my story in too glowing terms, forgetting that not every man would accept the proposition to cheat another. The dentist would have nothing to do with it. I approached him a number of times until he finally dismissed me and told me not to call again and that if I did so it was at my own risk.

I was not discouraged, and for weeks I haunted resorts where the faro bank steerers frequented. I was grooming myself so that the next time I approached a victim I would not overplay myself.

Gets First Victim.

A saloon keeper on Washington street, who is since dead, was my first victim. Walsh provided me with funds, and I "blew" myself good and plenty whenever I visited his saloon, and made it a point to go there every day for a week. I will not give the name of this man because he is dead.

At any rate my lavish expenditures attracted his curiosity, and he bluntly asked me one evening how I was able to do it, as he knew that I had given up my job with the Roxbury brewery. I informed him that I had made a lot of money in a big deal in New York, and it looked good for a barrel of money. Several days later I showed him $20,000 in real money. I told him the old familiar story of the faro-bank steer, and said I was going to New York that night at 5 o'clock, and expected to make at least $50,000.

"Why not put it off for a day and let me in on it?" said the saloonkeeper. The bank is closed and I will be unable to get the money until the morning."

I left the store, saying I would go to the Parker House and call up the faro bank dealer in New York on the long-distance telephone and get him to postpone the "flooding" of the big gambling club until the next night. I was back in an hour and we agreed to leave the next day on the 1 o'clock train with $40,000, $20,000 of which was put up by the saloon-keeper.

I steered a score of others for sums ranging from $1,000 to $3,000, averaging two or three dupes every week. As this money was divided between Walsh and myself after the expense for the pleated gambling house and police protection, it netted me about $20,000 in the first eight months I was operating this swindle.

TOOK $8,000 AWAY FROM A SCHOOLMATE OF MINE'

Among my victims was the son of the president of a trust company. He was an old schoolmate of mine in the South End and on the strength of the story that I placed before him he took $8,000 to New York and dropped it.

His name was mentioned in the Suffolk County Grand Jury investigation and when he was called before that body he denied that he had taken part in any such transaction.

I had gone along a year before any of my victims had made a "holler." Somebody tipped off my old schoolmate that he had been swindled and he put the matter in the hands of a lawyer who immediately got in touch with me.

Double Crossed "Steerer."

I boldly confronted the attorney and denied the swindle allegation, and said that I was ready to go to court any time they wanted to prosecute me. They never made any more demands for money.

Down in Peabody there was a school teacher named Walker who had a perfect mania for gambling. I never saw a man in my life who was so fond of taking a chance. He steered an official of the Malden Gas Light Company to Walsh for $10,000. Two days later the money was to be divided in a Boston hotel. Walker got about $4,000 for his share.

The next day Walsh heard that Walker was up in Manchester, N. H., and he departed for that town accompanied by two others and myself for the express purpose of skinning Walker out of his share of the Malden Gas official's loot.

We all played poker that night—it was stud poker—in the City Hotel, and when the game was over at 9 the next morning Walker did not have the price of his breakfast. He had as much chance to win as the Malden Gas official did in his efforts to break the New York faro bank.

Walsh put "paper" (marked cards) into the game, and if you know anything about stud poker you can readily see what a chance Walker had when Walsh could read from the back of a card what the "hole" card was.

We split Walker's money four ways, bought him his breakfast and gave him a ten-dollar note to get back to Peabody. We all agreed that it was a mighty smart trick.

Some time later I steered the same Malden official to Walsh, and he dropped another $10,000. Then Walsh got hold of Coleman.

In the early part of 1907 Draper was broke and desperate. He lacked the nerve to steer the Cambridge bank clerk so he went to Martin Walsh, explained what an easy mark Coleman was arranged for an introduction between Walsh and Coleman.

"Drag at Headquarters."

Walsh agreed to give Draper one-third of all the coin that he fleeced Coleman out of. I never knew exactly how much money Draper got from Walsh, but I think he received about $3,000, despite the fact that prior to my taking hold of Coleman, he had been duped out of some $50,000.

Martin by this time was a power in the underworld of Boston. Any swindling mob or grafting crew immediately run out of town. I don't mean figuratively, I mean literally run out of town.

Walsh had a drag up in Pemberton square and those who thought that he was four-flushing were politely told by certain police officials that they had better make themselves scarce in Boston.

This fact combined with his known intimacy with one of the big Republican bosses of Boston and his pull with Inspector Hilton of the New York Police Department, who has charge of the police in the Tenderloin District, made him a man to be feared by bunco men and thieves in general.

This is no general statement. If you do not believe it look back on the files of your newspapers and find the story about the mixup between Doles Bristol in Whitney, and Johnnie Marshall, who was a sort of lieutenant for the boys that made their headquarters at No. 6 Beacon street and occasionally plucked a lamb to fleece.

Marshall had steered Bristol to the faro bank swindle and bilked him out of $2,500 and put the whole bank role together. Marshall hauled over the money in the waiting-room of the South Station.

The moment that Bristol got possession of the $2,500 he started to run. Marshall ran after him, grappled with him and the next moment they were struggling on the floor of the waiting room. A Boston detective, assigned to the South Station, got hold of the men after they had been corralled by the special officer on duty. Marshall charged Bristol with the theft of the money and Bristol charged Marshall with being a swindler.

Taken to Headquarters.

Police Inspector Ollie Wise, who was perfectly innocent as to what the real trouble was, took both men to police headquarters. You will find on record at police headquarters a picture and measurements of Marshall, but you will find no record of his ever being brought to court.

Now to get back to Coleman. Martin Walsh introduced me to Coleman on Boston Common near the Charles street mall. Coleman was told by Leonard, as he knew Martin Walsh, that I had plenty of money and would try with his aid to break the bank.

After chatting for a few minutes Coleman and I left Martin and went over to the English room of the Thorndike and had dinner. We made the rounds of all the Back Bay hotels and wine flowed like water and I paid the bills. Every place we went I met a number of people who knew me and greeted me as if they really were glad to see me. I introduced them all to Coleman, giving Coleman a "phoney" name and telling him that the men he was meeting were judges and financiers.

I could see from the first handshake from Coleman that he liked me and after a night of revelry I knew that he was a proverbial easy mark. As I reflect now, I really cannot understand the confidence that he showed in me.

No matter how often I suggested it dug up money and went to New York. On the way over it was one round of feasting and drinking upon all occasions. He usually took the midnight home, and for months he made the trip to New York two and three times a week.

Time and again he never went near the places he believed were gambling houses. He stayed around the hotel or frequented the different restaurants, and when I came back and told him I had lost he would take it as complacently as if it were only a matter of a few dollars instead of several thousand.

About a month and a half from the date of our meeting I called him up on the phone and told him I was going to New York that night to play the bank, and that I would take the usual 5 o'clock train. He made arrangements to meet me at the Thorndike at 4 o'clock, and when he came there he handed me $4,000 and told me to play it. He said he could not go to New York as he had to meet his sweetheart, Mamie Taylor.

I could not see the necessity of going through the formality of a five hour trip to New York when all I needed to do was to report to George the next day that I had lost, so I did not go to New York.

That night I was entertaining a party of friends at the Cafe Maurice in the Westminster Hotel, Copley square, and much to my surprise in walked Coleman accompanied by a lady.

I must confess that I was frustrated, but managed to hold my nerve. As Coleman came towards me I greeted him affectionately by throwing my arms around his neck and at the same time whispering in his ear: "George, I missed that damn 5 o'clock train."

"That's all right Bill, you can go over tomorrow night," said Coleman. He had a drink with us and two days later I phoned him the same old result.

After the first few times that I took Coleman to New York I found it quite unnecessary to stimulate him with any story about big winnings. He just took it as a matter of fact that I played the money and after we arrived in New York he just wandered around and got whatever entertainment his big bank roll could furnish.

"Coleman Seemed Fascinated."

We usually parted at the bar in the Knickerbocker. I would ostensibly get into a taxi-cab to be driven to one of the many places that he believed Jack Leonard to be a dealer in. He usually stood at the taxi-cab door and heard me give the orders to the driver. After we had driven four or five blocks I would stop the taxi-cab, pay the driver and visit a number of haunts of mine, not known to Coleman. I would be back in time to take the train home with George.

Of course, this was not the program all the time. Coleman accompanied me to the "bank" many times. Whether he came along with me or not "the house" would be well supplied with a crowd to all intents and purposes gambling for large stakes.

In the fifteen months or more that Coleman and I were doing business together with Martin Walsh, I heard from him every day. He seemed to be fascinated with me. Whenever he got up a little party, I was always one of the guests.

"This is Big Bill Keliher, the best fellow on earth,"—that was the way that Coleman usually introduced me to his friends.

My co-workers in this swindle of mine have played a great deal of the blame for the expose to my lavish expenditures at the various hotels and my foolish habit of showing $20,000 or $30,000 while I sat around buying wine for the crowd, yet very few of them ever heard from me of my connection with Coleman until the newspapers had been filled with it, as I always made it a point to keep Coleman out of sight of my friends and the men I was associated with in the operation of the faro bank swindle.

About a year after I first got a hold of Coleman I determined to go after some other big game and it was this resolve that led me on the track of a big banker in the down-town financial district.

After New Game.

This is one man among my many victims that I cannot express any regret for having fleeced. He is president of a big trust company in the financial district of Boston and knows us by his intimates as a right-wad. Walsh and I fleeced him out of $60,000 and I must say that I took keener delight in doing it than any other job during my career as a bunco man.

As a bank president, guarding other people's money, he should be the last one to fall a victim to any such scheme, but I knew how stingy he was, and as stingy men are in a lot of cases avaricious, I laid my plans to trap him. He fell into my net before the stage was set.

GAMBLERS SPECULATED ON COLEMAN

George W. Coleman's name, with his possibilities for "loot," was bought and sold by the faro swindlers like so much speculative mining stock on the curb market.

"Coleman," as the bank clerk would have been styled in the language of the curb, had a recognized value among the gamblers. He was rated high on account of his opportunities to get money.

But this value was "shaded" a bit on account of the risk of playing for bank bundles.

According to "Big Bill's" confession, Frank L. Draper first "promoted Coleman," so to speak. It was worth about $30,000 to Draper. Draper "sold Coleman" to Martin Walsh, a bolder gambler, for $2,500 cash and a half share of the profits Walsh might make.

"Big Bill" says Walsh "played Coleman" for $50,000.

KELIHER SAYS FOUR PEOPLE IN BOSTON HAVE MOST OF $350,000 BANK LOOT

BELIEVES RECEIVER BATES CAN RECOVER MORE THAN $200,000 OF COLEMAN THEFTS.

how a rich Boston contractor, or any other individual, could spend any sum of money to prosecute men in Keliher's behalf.

Here is told Keliher's own story of how the great bunco man was bunco'ed out of $75,000:

The men I trimmed were pretty easy, but they were not half as easy as I was after I came back to Boston. I have to laugh now when I think of how innocent I was while they were taking my $73,000 away from me.

I was in New York when my name was first mentioned in connection with Coleman. I had plenty of money with me, and some of it was on deposit in New York. A couple of Boston men, one a lawyer, sent for me to come to their hotel. I went and they told me if I would return to Boston everything would be fixed up for me and I would not be arrested.

I came over and when I got here I met some other men who told me that everything had been fixed. Coleman was to stand for his part in it and was to protect me, but it would cost me some money. I was told that it was just a case of settling, of fixing some people.

False friends of mine collected from Walsh and myself under false pretences. They agreed to put the money to good use and, so far as my case was concerned, they said my share of the contribution would be expended in a manner that could not fail to bring me absolute freedom.

They said they would first try to prevent my indictment. In talking of their plans they even went into details. They said they would give $5,000 to the United States District Attorney and $2,000 to his assistant.

Bluffed by False Friends.

I once put this up to the District Attorney; and he was mad as a hornet. In justice to him I want you to say for me that I now fully appreciate that I was bluffed by my false friends in connection with their ability to "put next" to those officials. As a matter of fact, they bluffed me regarding everything they said they could do for me.

If they could not "stall" the indictment they said they would surely be able to "fix" the jury either for acquittal or disagreement. I believed in them implicitly until after sentence was imposed on me. Then I woke up and knew I had been bluffed.

They got the money, and are now laughing at my gullibleness. They knew it was the bank's money, which I would now like to have the receiver of the National City Bank recover. I would like to see them punished for receiving stolen property which they agreed to use for me.

How He Was Queered.

The thing that queered me was my fear of State Prison. I spent $73,000 trying to keep out of here and I got trimmed. If I had known then how good a place it is here, I would have been that much in. Now I'm going to "get" those who "got" me.

I've made a statement to John L. Bates, the bank receiver, that will raise the roof when he sees fit to let it loose.

I gave a copy of my first statement to a Boston contractor, who, while I never knew him in any way except socially, I believed to be square. I gave him a copy of the Bates statement a few days ago and he read it through.

He told me that he would see that I got justice within a month. That he was willing to see it through if it cost him $100,000.

Keliher then goes on and gives the names of the men who took his money away from him. For obvious reasons the AMERICAN for the present omits these names.

6, 1910, came to my house at 8:15 accompanied by ——, ——'s side partner, and said:

"—— has sent me down for $5,000."

I said: "He hasn't said anything to me about it."

—— replied: "I have just come from New York to attend to it. This money has got to go to the United States District Attorney at the Federal Building tonight to stop the indictment."

Gave $1000 Bills.

I told him I did not have the $5,000 in the house, but could get it the next day—came back the next morning and said that he got the money from ——.

Later I sent my wife (Mrs. Anna G. Keliher) to get the $5,000 in a reimburse —— so that he could give it back to ——. She delivered the money to —— at Klein's drug store at the corner of Boylston and Tremont streets. The money consisted of five $1,000 bills.

—— came back the net night and told me what he did with the money. He said:

"I did a good job for you, Bill, which I wouldn't do for anybody else in the country. You know I was up for perjury one time before and got out of it. You know about that, Bill."

I said I did.

Then —— continued:

"The United States District Attorney is doing it for the consideration that I go back to Beacon Hill and vote for Henry Cabot Lodge for senator."

"All Bottled Up."

On March 18,1910, —— came to me and said:

"Bill, I've got the matter all bottled up. —— wanted $5,000. (This referred to an Assistant United States District Attorney.)

I said: "I haven't got $5,000."

"I said I had $3,000. I gave him later a $5,000 fee. That was on March 22, 1910.

I was arrested the last Friday in April, in the case of the United States Court I said to ——:

"What have you done about the case?" ——— said: "Oh, the United States District Attorney got cold feet. Don't do any talking, Bill."

I am still waiting for that $5,000 which ——— or ——— supposed to have given to the federal attorney.

In December, 1911, I went over this matter with the United States District Attorney. He was surprised. I told him that I personally had $8,000 of my own money and my wife gave $8,000 of her money.

On May 16, 1910, ——— again came to my house and got $5,000 from me which was to go, ——— said, to Dr. Faxon, to fix the jurors who were to sit on my case. This money was given to ——— in the presence of my wife. ——— bought a case of whiskey and that was the last seen of ———, —— and ——— double-crossed me.

I thought everything had been so fixed that there was not a chance that I would be convicted. All through the trial I thought it was merely part of a game. I was not worrying about my case.

I was willing to go on the witness stand, but I did not think it was necessary. I thought it would be a waste of time.

When I was found guilty I got a shock. I began to wake up after that and I began to see that I had been spending my money for nothing. I ought to have kept it and taken what was coming to me.

But that isn't worrying me now. The money came to me easily and I had no right to it. I ought to have lost it, but I have been doing some thinking lately. It seems to me that the money ought to go back to the people that are entitled to it, and I would like to see Governor Bates get it away from the people who took it from me.

Walsh parted with money when he was told by this man that I was going to squeal if he did not get bail.

How to Stop a Cough

Something Every Mother Should Know

Every mother should watch over the health of her family as jealously as she guards the family morals. At the first symptom of a cough or cold, take together in a large bottle a couple of ounces of glycerine, half an ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine and about half a pint of pure whiskey.

Give the patient a teaspoonful of this simple mixture after every one of four hours. The first dose almost invariably brings instant relief, and the cold is generally expelled from the system inside of twenty-four hours. A supply of this medicine should always be kept in the medicine cabinet to prevent the development of serious infections of the throat and bronchiles.

You probably have the glycerine and whiskey in the home already and you can get the Virgin Oil of Pine at any drug store. To insure freshness and purity insist on having the half-ounce vials which come in sealed wooden cartons bearing the label of

The Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati

COLEMAN'S FORMER SWEETHEART.

Mamie Hightower was in New York when George W. Coleman began stealing from the Cambridge bank. He met her there when he went with Keliher to break the faro bank.

for me. He gave $30,000 in all to secure bail for me. This man knew I was getting money from the bank. He had been in the business more or less for eight or nine years, introducing Walsh to different subjects that he thought Walsh might make something out of.

A third $10,000 which Walsh gave up was placed as a bet with a man well known at the Bellevue Hotel. He said that he would hold the money as a bet, but not otherwise. The $10,000 was put up in his hands. I was supposed to be betting $5,000 that I would not be indicted, and Walsh was supposed to be betting $5,000 that I would be indicted. But the money put up all came from Walsh. It was put in a safe deposit box.

During my trial I signed a paper releasing my interest in this $10,000, but the holder would not turn it over without a written request from me. I told the attorney interested in the case that I had no ownership whatever in that $10,000, and he said: "Well, it is only a matter of form. The matter is all bottled up."

They were just kidding me. The man who was supposed to fetch the jury is an honorable gentleman. He was in the Massachusetts Legislature at that time, representing a nearby city. That is a sample of what I have been up against in trying to get a square deal from friends and strangers.

Tell me, is Big Bill Keliher the big crook in this case?

Was Just as Easy.

I was trimmed for my money about as nearly as I trimmed other people. None of the money I got from Coleman did me any good, for I gave it all away and did not get a run for my money at that.

I gave up the money because I was told that certain things had to be done to make sure I would not be convicted. Every dollar I gave up I understood was to be applied to secure my acquittal.

I thought the men to whom I gave the money were able to do what they said they would. I thought they were my friends, and I also thought they were on the inside.

I did not have any doubt of their standing when several things happened just as they tipped me off. For instance, from one of the men to whom I gave money I got advance information as to what the Government officers were going to do, and the tip was right, too.

Once I was told that two men representing the prosecution were coming to my home in Winthrop. I was told the train they would take, and sure enough they arrived on that train. After a few straight tips like that I gave up my money with every confidence that these men were keeping their word and were paving the way for my acquittal.

I didn't wake up until I was sentenced. Then I found out that I had thrown my money away. I would have been better off if I had kept my $73,000 and pleaded guilty.

The biggest piece of luck I ever had in my life was when I was sent to the State Prison. If I had gone anywhere else I would be dead by this time.

Despite Keliher's statements of being swindled out of $73,000 by four Boston men, the federal authorities, higher even than those in Boston, have determined to their complete satisfaction that Keliher's story is without basis. They say:

That Keliher is either lying or does not know what he is talking about.

That the statements reflecting on these Boston men have been proven untrue in court, before Congressman Robert O. Harris as master.

Daniel H. Coakley, who was Keliher's counsel, has stated that all he received in the Keliher case was $16,000 for the long and laborious work he rendered. Mr. Coakley has proved these figures to the perfect satisfaction of the authorities.

So far as Keliher's charges against the four Boston men go, United States District Attorney French and former Governor Bates, receiver for the National City Bank of Cambridge, are positive that there is no truth in them.

'I WAS DOUBLE CROSSED WHEN I CAME BACK HERE'

The second installment of William J. Keliher's confession to ex-Governor John L. Bates is made public today. In it he says:

I was trimmed for my $61,000 about as neatly as I trimmed other people. None of the money I got from Coleman did me any good, for I gave it all away and did not get a run for my money at that.

I gave up the money because I was told that certain things had to be done to make sure I would not be convicted. Every dollar I gave up I understood was to be applied to secure my acquittal.

I thought the men to whom I gave the money were able to do what they said they would. I thought they were my friends, and I also thought they were on the inside.

I did not have any doubt of their standing when several things happened just as they tipped me off. For instance, from one of the men to whom I gave money I got advance information as to what the Government officers were going to do, and the tip was right, too.

Once I was told that two men representing the prosecution were coming to my home in Winthrop. I was told the train they would take, and sure enough they arrived on that train. After a few straight tips like that I gave up my money with every confidence that these men were keeping their word and were paving the way for my acquittal.

I didn't wake up until I was sentenced. Then I found out that I had thrown my money away. I would have been better off if I had kept my $61,000 and pleaded guilty.

The biggest piece of luck I ever had in my life was when I was sent to the State Prison. If I had gone anywhere else I would be dead by this time.

"Conned Myself About Bank."

Of course if I had any brains at all I must have known that Coleman was taking the money from the bank. Coleman used to tell me at first that he had a legacy and afterward that he was cashing checks on his father's account. I knew he was the bookkeeper in the bank and I also knew his story was no good.

But I kept telling myself that of course Coleman was not stealing from the bank. I kept conning myself.

I knew better, but I kept on trying to make myself believe that Coleman was getting the money from some other source than the bank. I never wanted to believe that the money he was taking over to New York and losing to Walsh and myself belonged to the bank.

I kept up the [illegible] of myself until Coleman told me the night he ran away that he had stolen the money from the bank.

We did not have to move about to avoid the police. We had the New York police with us.

The first time I met Lieutenant ——— was at Sherry's the night before the Fourth in 1909. I don't think I will ever forget the scene. Sherry's is the grandest restaurant in the world. It was filled that night by the wealthiest people in New York. Nothing but eight-dollar stuff was popping and the place was gay with gorgeously dressed women. Walsh and I dropped in, and as we passed the lieutenant, who was dining with a party of friends, he nodded, and after we were seated he came over.

He was Walsh's friend. Walsh made the introduction and the lieutenant sat down. He is one of the handsomest men I have ever seen. He is tall and straight and something of an aristocrat. He never associated with his brother officers. He belonged to a very fine family and was well fixed socially. For that reason I could never understand why he went into the police department.

We opened a bottle of wine for him, and while we were drinking he said: "Martin, I'm getting sick of the police department. I would like to get out."

"Well," said Martin, "if you want a pension we will put up $1,500 each" (meaning Walsh and myself). "We need a young fellow like you on our staff. The occasion is likely to come when we may need you."

Martin then pulled out his roll and slipped the lieutenant $1,500 in bills. I did the same.

The lieutenant took the money, thanked us and said: "If I get my pension consider me at your service."

In the discussion over the wine Coleman was mentioned. He had come over from Boston with me that night, but I left him after we came out of the gambling house. He went to see some friends and I went up town to meet Walsh.

The possibility of trouble with him was discussed. The lieutenant remarked that he had a close call himself once. I learned afterward that before he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant and while he was still a patrolman, he was indicted for murder in the first degree. He shot a girl and was locked up for three days. The indictment was finally quashed in some way and he was allowed to remain in the department.

The discussion ended by the lieutenant saying: "I will take him off your hands for two years at $5,000 a year and keep him in Australia."

The lieutenant got the pension a short time afterward and is still drawing it from the city of New York. He went to Hot Springs and the doctor fixed up a certificate for some ailment or other and the thing went through.

LIEUTENANT GOT $200 FOR 15 MINUTES' GUARD DUTY

While he was in the department and after he was pensioned he guarded the gambling house all the time Walsh and I were there. Walsh hired him. The lieutenant got $200 a night. The play never lasted more than fifteen minutes. We went in, laid our money down twice, and the third time it was all over. The play was apparently going on, but the victim was taken away from the table to get a glass of wine and a cigar and then he was taken out.

I always had a bank roll to give the lieutenant the tip that it was all over. As I appeared at the door the lieutenant walked away. He had a room in a house directly opposite. After his tour of duty was up he took off his uniform and went home. Shortly before 8 he appeared at the house opposite the gambling house, dressed in uniform again, carrying it in a dress suit case, and came across after we reached the club.

His duty was to take care of anyone who got the money and tried to make trouble. He was also there to protect us from a possible raid. Although I never saw a raid, I always knew when a squad from some other division might happen along on some pretext or other to look in. It was the lieutenant's duty to keep the police as well as the public away.

Didn't Want to Kill Him.

He knew his duty. The night the money lender who was a favorite at Harvard started to shriek and yell that he was robbed in a hallway, and that he (the man) was going to hit him over the head when I gave him the tip and we had it all to ourselves.

I was willing to take the money lender's roll, but I did not want his blood and told the lieutenant so. The lieutenant would like a little fun.

The lieutenant, taking the tip, threatened to arrest us if we did not give him a share. It was all play for us, but the man who lost his $4,000 believed he was in earnest, and as he was so convinced that it was the lieutenant who got his money back for him that he gave the lieutenant a check for $50. The lieutenant gave a fictitious name and address and a friend cashed the check for him.

A crack over the head with the lieutenant's stick would at least have sent the man from Boston to the hospital for repairs. His talk about being robbed at a gambling club would be taken for delirium, and by the time he was released he would be escorted to the Grand Central station and told to go back to Boston and the police would let him know when they wanted him.

Had Woman Watch Bank.

Coleman one night happened to get ahead of me in betting the club and caught sight of the lieutenant outside the house. He darted back and whispered to me that the police were outside. I knew who it was, of course, but did not let him in on the secret. I went to the door and stood until the lieutenant had a chance to get away. Then I said no one was there, and we went out.

Finally Coleman told me he was in a hole. I sent in a call for Walsh to meet me in Boston. He was stopping at the Woodstock Inn at Woodstock, Vt., at the time. There were a number of wealthy men there for the Winter. The Lieutenant came over from New York and the three of us met at the Somerset.

Walsh had kept a watch on the bank through a woman, so that the minute anything happened to Coleman he might be informed. The possibility of trouble was discussed again. The proposition was put up to the lieutenant to take Coleman to Australia.

He said: "My advice is keep him here and get the thing over. If I take him to Australia, we will only have the same trouble over again when we return."

I told him that he offered to go to Australia with Coleman the night we gave him the $5,000 for his expenses. He had already secured his pension and seemed to feel different about it. When we got together and offered him $10,000 then and there, he said: "You want my best judgment on this matter, don't you? Well, then, keep Coleman here. My judgment ought to be of some weight. It has been tested before and came out all right."

We talked the whole thing over. We had plenty of wine, and with the lieutenant's assistance we got to meet the situation and not run from it, we decided to do as he suggested.

He had confidence on that occasion. If Coleman had been taken to Australia it would have been impossible to expose the game. After all the money we gave the lieutenant I felt that we got a good look on us. For some reason or other he did not want to leave New York.

MUST POLITICIANS GIVE BACK ELECTION WINNINGS?

Will the twenty prominent Boston politicians who won $22,000 from William J. (Big Bill) Keliher on Fitzgerald-Storrow municipality campaign be forced to give back the money to John L. Bates, receiver of the National City Bank?

Did George W. Coleman steal the money from the bank and give it to Keliher to bet?

Or was it money which Keliher had received as his share of the money which the Martin Walsh gang of confidence men had obtained by bunco?

These questions were asked by Boston politicians today as a result of Keliher's confession to Receiver Bates. One of the politicians who won from Keliher has already announced himself as fund out his ready commitment to hand on his share of the money he won. All of the politicians declare they will fight any attempt to recover the money.

The story of how Keliher bet the money and then lost it is one of the most interesting of those brought to light showing the operations of Keliher. It is told today for the first time.

"Big Bill" was a strong Storrow supporter. He had won a seat in the Boston Common Council as a Pellet-Hill contest for District Attorney and when the Mayoralty contest came on he threw in his lot with Storrow. He was prominent in the campaign with thousands more on James J. Storrow. The Fitzgerald money was put up by prominent supporters of the Mayor.

Most of this money was placed the night before election day that marked the close of the campaign contest. "Big Bill" had been freely offering odds of ten to seven on the Good Government candidate. He boasted that he would put under cover all of the Fitzgerald money in sight.

On the day before election he appeared at City Hall with $15,000 in brand new $1,000 bills.

"I'll take all the Fitzgerald money in sight," he said, "and there's more where this comes from."

He was immediately invited [illegible] Young's Hotel, by supporters of the Mayor, who promised to find the necessary money to cover his wagers.

Win Keliher's Money.

"Big Bill" waited for over two hours while the Mayor's friends hustled about to get the money. It was in the afternoon; the banks were closed and the Fitzgerald rooters had difficulty in raising the ready cash. "Big Bill" waited two hours in the bar of Young's Hotel. He whiled away the time by buying his friends drinks and cigars. Then after what was passed over to the cashier before he left the hotel.

Finally, after calling all of the Fitzgerald men a crowd of "welchers" and "welchers," he left for his favorite haunts.

In the meantime the friends and backers of the Mayor had been scouring the city to get the necessary money "to back 'Big Bill' into his hole."

By 6 p. m. a pool of over $50,000 had been raised to cover the Keliher roll. There was no difficulty in finding "Big Bill." He was in his favorite seat at Clark's Hotel, surrounded by his cronies.

"I understand you have some money to bet," said the spokesman of the Fitzgerald roosters.

"I have and plenty of it," said "Big Bill."

"How much do you want to bet?" was asked.

"Anything you say," replied Keliher.

"How much have you got?" was the next question.

Big Bill extracted the roll. The new $1,000 bills he had displayed in the afternoon were drawn from the $5,000 bank.

"We'll cover that and as much more," said the spokesman for the Fitzgerald backers as he counted out the necessary money to cover the $15,000 from a fat roll of yellow backs.

Big Bill was flabbergasted. After some preliminary discussion as to the stakeholder, the money was posted and the wager officially stated.

Would Fight Repayment.

The backers of the Mayor then went around the corridors of the hotel and in less than half an hour had cornered every dollar of Storrow money in sight. They sent the odds flying from 10 to 7 on Storrow to 10 to 6 on Fitzgerald.

It was a great coup, and those who were in the pool split up handsome profits. The betting had an important effect on the election, since it strengthened the weak supporters of the Mayor into a belief that he was certain to win.

"Big Bill" paid over his losses without a whimper. It was a heavy blow, but he never made a murmur, and the incident was closed.

What interests the politicians now is the possibility that they may be obliged to pay over this money won in the mayoralty contest. These bets were in the pool comprise some of the most influential members of the Democratic City Committee. One of them has already consulted counsel, and declares that he is certain that the government has no claim upon the money. Keliher stole the money, but those who bet against it were not aware of the fact, according to the politicians, and they announce quietly that they will resist any attempt by the government to make them refund their winnings.

WELL, THEY DID 'TROT' AFTER ALL AT ASSEMBLY

Boston's society's smart and exclusive Assembly at the Copley-Plaza DID have its "turkey trot" and "bunny hug" anyway.

For an hour or more early today men and women in the younger set turkey-trotted and bunny-hugged to their heart's content, in the face of the dark of the Back Bay matrons who frowned all the newfangled dances down in the first hours of the Assembly.

This news, which leaked to the ears of the general public this afternoon, has caused a stir in society circles, since the letting in of the trot and hug has set the matrons to saying bitterest sort of things and to threatening to withdraw their support from future assemblies.

Everything had proceeded finely under the auspices of S. Hooper-Hooper, Barrett Wendell, Jr., and Philip S. Sears, who had been told by Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears and Mrs. Frank Peabody that neither trot nor hug would be allowed their sanction. Then came supper at midnight. The matrons had begun to leave for home.

It wasn't long after the return to the ballroom that the younger folk, who had been impatiently biding their time, simply broke loose and whirlen and swirled until nearly 4 a. m.

RULING FORCES TO TRIAL THE $3,000,000 SHOE MACHINE SUIT

The United Shoe Machinery Company lost in the latest step of the $3,000,000 suit brought by Harry L. Miller, C. Filley of Boston and Charles A. Strout of Portland, Me., for damages under the Sherman anti-trust act when Judge Colt of the United States District Court overruled the demurrers filed by the machine company.

The suits in which Filley and Strout claim they were driven out of business will now come to trial.

Filley was in the shoe machinery business at No. 118 South street, Boston, twenty years ago. At that time he said he was offered $50,000 for his business and threatened with the loss of his trade if he did not accept.

CASSIDY SAYS PHELPS LACKS FACTS ABOUT ADULTERATIONS OF FOOD

Cassidy today discusses the attitude on pure food questions of Professor Earle B. Phelps of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who, at a recent meeting before the Boston Scientific Society, denounced Dr Wiley and his disciples for their opposition to poisons and adulterants in foods. "Professor Phelps," says Cassidy, "knows his chemistry, but he does not know the facts as to food adulteration. Three years from now he will possibly regret his attack upon Dr. Wiley."

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Professor Earle B. Phelps of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has denounced Dr. Wiley and others for fighting for the cause of pure and honest foods.

Professor Phelps is undoubtedly an eminent and learned gentleman. I am not. I am neither chemist, bacteriologist or physician.

But I have come in personal touch with food adulterators. I have seen their revolting work—have seen them throwing refuse meat into the sausage grinder and sprinkling poisonous preservatives over it to check decay. I have seen them breaking rotten eggs, picking out the rotted spots and the embryo chicks, and throwing the rest into huge cans, later to be carted away to the bakers, and still later to appear as pound cake or in other attractive forms, on our tables.

Professor Phelps has perhaps tested these products in the laboratory. I am not at all sure that he has. But I know that he has never seen the adulterators and poisoners at work.

The scientific viewpoint is a cold one. The scientist tells you that one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda in catsup is harmless. But he does not realize that the same percentage of benzoate may run through all a person's food. If it is allowed in one article of food it must be allowed in all.

At the Danger Point.

It is possible for a person today, eating three normal meals, and eating only foods legally sold under your Massachusetts laws, to get as high as a gram of benzoate of soda into your systems in a single day. The Remedy Board itself—the board which has sanctioned benzoate—says, if I am not mistaken, that benzoate is harmless up to three-tenths of a gram a day. But when it reaches a gram it becomes dangerous.

Even if the drug were not itself harmful, I ask Professor Phelps to remember this fact.

That benzoate is never used in catsup or any canned and air-tight products to prevent decay of fresh fruits. Any housewife will tell you that fresh fruits canned in air-tight cans will not decay. When benzoate is used it is used to stop decay that has already begun.

Therefore, when benzoate is found in a canned or bottle food, it is almost prima facie evidence that that food was not fresh and in good condition when it was canned or bottled.

"Glucose" as an adulterant should not be tolerated," said Professor Phelps. "But glucose sold as such, for food purposes, deserves a place in our dietary."

The question of glucose is a gigantic one. Professor Phelps says, and rightly, that glucose as an adulterant should not be tolerated.

So far as my knowledge goes, glucose is not for sale in any retail stores, under its own name, or as an article of food.

So far as I know its only commercial use is for the adulteration of other food products. You will find glucose in mazzenous, mince meat, jellies, syrups, and in a thousand other unexpected places.

Acid in Sawdust.

Glucose properly made is all right. But glucose may be made from the starch of the corn, from the starch potatoes, from cornstalks or corn husks, from the branches and bark of trees, or in fact, from almost any vegetable substance. Glucose may be made, for instance, by treating sawdust with sulphuric acid.

Until there is the closest government regulation of the making and marketing of glucose, it is not deserving of a place in our bills of fare. It is like decomargarine—a perfectly legitimate and valuable food product if rightly used, but a product that offers the food manufacturer or retailer too much temptation to deceive or cheat his customers.

Professor Phelps said Dr. Wiley was wrong in his condemnation of benzoate of soda. I have showed you the two counts against benzoate:

First—In anything but the most minute quantities it is dangerous or even poisonous. If it be allowed in one food, it must be allowed in all. If a small quantity is allowed, there will be many cases where an excess is actually used. Therefore, if benzoate, or any other preservative, is used at all, the consumer is helpless and may be eating one to three grams of preservatives, embalming fluids and poisons a day.

Second—Benzoate's only use is to cheat. It is put in foods to stop their putrefaction—not to prevent their putrefaction. Benzoate need never be used in fresh products. It is tasteless, without food value, and its only use is to cloak imperfect, decayed or putrifying foods in a deceitful cloak of freshness. Where it is used, in catsups, for instance, you will sometimes find saccharin was also used to give a sweet taste to the pulpy mixture of rotten tomatoes; sometimes, also, coloring matter is used to secure the bright red effect.

Those are the two great counts in the indictment against benzoate.

Glue and Gelatine.

Professor Phelps said: "The chemist makes no distinction between glue and gelatine." Therefore, he argues, it matters not at all whether glue or gelatine be used in your candies.

It is true that the chemist makes no distinction, but the child's stomach does. I've often told the story of the glue case in Philadelphia. Let me repeat it.

I traced several cases of sickness to a certain candy. I had samples of the candy analyzed. They appeared to be adulterated with gelatine, but otherwise all right.

I went to the manufacturer and said his candies were bad, and charged him with using glue—for the chemist had told me that the gelatine might be glue.

The candy man referred me to his gelatine man. I went to this latter man.

"Why, Mr. Cassidy," he said, "I dont sell that man any gelatine. I sell him a lot of glue—the same as I sell to painters and paper hangers for sizing walls."

He showed me his receipts to prove that what he had sold was sold as glue.

There's a case where glue in candy, undetected by chemists, yet made children sick. Mr. Phelps will not dare attempt to defend this.

Professor Phelps also ratted Dr. Wiley, because Dr. Wiley does not believe that children should be sold candies adulterated with coal tar dyes. The coal tar dye, says Professor Phelps, is harmless, as is used in candy.

I would like to ask, then, why the dye is put in the candy.

It is put there to deceive—to lure the child with flashy colors, and for no other reason under the sun. That is why I personally do not believe in coal tar dyes in candy or in any food.

Demand Honest Food.

I believe, not only in pure foods, and "harmless" foods, but in honest foods. The harmless adulterants sanctioned by learned chemists are starving the American people to death.

Professor Phelps also criticised Dr. Wiley because Dr. Wiley, in turn, denounced Professor Sedgwick. Professor Phelps' colleagues, in connection with the above testimony given by Professor Sedgwick in an egg case in New Jersey—

The eggs in this court case had been broken into cans. It was testified that chickens' eyes, embryonic glands, "spots" of rot, rat effluvia and other substances were fished out of the tainted, scientific point of view of the mixture killed a guinea pig.

Professor Sedgwick testified that those eggs were not rotten.

I propose to devote a later article to a full discussion of this case and of Professor Sedgwick's testimony. It gives a curious insight into the detached, scientific point of view of the modern collegian.

CROWD SEES MAN STRUCK BY ENGINE

Thirty men and women commuters at the Mt. Bowdoin railroad station in Dorchester saw Joseph Francisco, a Hyde Park carpenter, bounded between the train and a fence when he was struck by the locomotive. The accident was unusual, and the eye witnesses declared that Francisco was bounded between train and fence like a "skipping stone."

Women shrieked as the carpenter, who was repairing the fence, was bowled along. That he kept his feet was all that saved him from being crushed to death. He was taken to the Masschusetts General Hospital, where his condition is said to be serious, but not critical.

He was injured about the head and shoulders by being thrown from train to fence and back again for half a dozen times.

While the police were watching g the house yesterday, Mrs. Gately came to the District Attorney's office and pleaded with District Attorney Pelletier to make her husband's sentence light. She said that he was ill and could not stand a jail sentence. Mr. Pelletier told her that the judges demanded jail sentences for pickpockets and he could do nothing for her.

When arrested Gately was taken to the station house and later sent to the Charles Street Jail. He will appear in court Monday. Three other young men arrested with Gately pleaded guilty and are now serving time in States prison.

Herb Smoke for Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way and It Costs Nothing to Try

This preparation of herbs, leaves, flowers and berries (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drug) is either smoked in an ordinary clean pipe or smoking tube, and by drawing the moderated smoke into the mouth and inhaling into the lungs or sending it out through the nostrils in a perfectly natural way, the worst case of Catarrh can be eradicated.

It is not unpleasant to use, and at the same time it is perfectly harmless, and can be used by men, women or child; as Catarrh is contracted by breathing cold or dust and impurities in the air, it is natural that it goes to all the affected parts of the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs. It is readily so used by many treatments, but they are not natural methods, neither do they reach all the affected parts.

If you have Catarrh, this simple, safe, reliable treatment should cure you.

The black in above cut shows the parts reached by Dr. Blosser's Remedy. It's the whole disease, not a spot, head or throat remedy. Goes to K. D. E. Kills Catarrh Germs. It wipes out the disease wherever it goes.

An illustrated book which goes thoroughly into the whole question of the cause and prevention of catarrh will be sent free, postpaid, by Dr. J. W. Blosser, 210 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga.

You can also mail you five days' free treatment. You will at once see that it is a wonderful remedy. Send a postal card or dollar bill for regular full sized treatment, which is worth its weight in gold for permanent relief and money—simply send your name and address and the booklet and free trial package will be mailed you immediately.

Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, mainly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits. No more of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to pacify the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. I will send you my regular, full, complete, three-fold Lexoid, combined course of treatment without a penny's expense, charges paid, to try free, just as my unequalled offer states. I don't mean a small, worthless sample, or a trial test treatment, that you can't tell anything about. I mean a regular, full treatment, and when I say a full treatment I mean a full treatment, just as I say. I will send it to you complete—charges paid—delivered to your door—ready for you to use—so you can commence it at once.

My treatment has helped thousands to regain their health. Those with tired, aching backs, with miserable bladder and urinary troubles, others still and bent with rheumatism —and it has made them well, the most chronic, severe, long-standing, obstinate cases, after all else had failed to cure them. Hundreds using my treatment in despair, have gone their way rejoicing. They were hopeless and it made them well. They were suffering and it eased their pains, soothed their aches, brightened their lives and made them happy, and now, I offer you my wonderful treatment to try free—take it—use it—if you want to get well.

If you have backache, kidney, bladder trouble or rheumatism, dizziness, puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, nervousness, tired and worn-out feeling, if the urine is light and pale, dark colored or cloudy, if you make water often, getting up during the night, if scanty or smarts and burns in passing, if there is sediment or brick dust when it stands, you need my treatment without a minute's delay.

Don't Continue Suffering.

My specialty is such diseases. I treat thousands of cases—helping them after all else has failed. I am successful in my life work because I love it. I love my profession. My whole mind and soul are wrapped up in it, and I am happy. You would be happy, too, if you were bringing happiness to thousands of suffering people right along, as I am now. I love to feel I am helping people to enjoy life, and I want to help you to get the bright side of life and enjoy every minute of true health and happiness.

I want to help you to get well, and be strong again, so you can work, and walk, and run, and jump without pain; so you can sleep without disturbance, and wake up refreshed and rested, able to use every muscle, nerve, cord and joint of your body, without suffering misery all the day long.

I want you to try my regular full complete treatment. My new scientific course of medicines—harmless, soothing, healing, penetrating remedies, that reach the spot, drive away uric acid, cleanse, purify, strengthen, invigorate and encourage the kidneys to properly filter the blood.

That stop the pain, give strength to the nerves, life and ambition to the mind and body, and do it quickly, quietly, without loss of time.

My Unequaled Offer.

Now, here is my offer—I will send you a regular, full, complete three-fold Lexoid course of treatment, without a penny in advance—charges paid—ready to use—to try free, just as I promise. Remember, I don't mean a sample, or a trial, or a test, such as others call proof treatments. I mean a regular, full, complete course of remedies.

Take it when it comes. Use half of it, and see just what it does. Then when you know it has helped you, when you know you are getting better, just send me a small amount, an amount within your easy reach—an amount you can easily afford to spare—but I'll tell you what. I know you'll be willing to do your part when it helps you—and your word is good enough for me. It will help you quickly. But you are the one to be the judge. Try it first, put it aside, when you know, not before. When you have used half of it, if you are not satisfied in every way, if it helps you, if it doesn't cost you a penny to try my treatment—I will send it to you charges paid, take it, try it, and find out.

A Full Treatment, Free To Try.

I am the only one to-day making this offer, sending a full treatment, on free trial, for such diseases. You know I could not afford to do it if I did not feel sure it would help you—and I am sure it would cure. That's why I can afford to send it free—but you are the one to decide just as the one to the right decision. It must help you, it must satisfy you—before you send a penny. And you are the one to say. I will leave it entirely to your word. It's all up with you yourself. What you say goes. That's all I care for. I don't want a penny unless it helps you. I would not take a cent that I am not entitled to. I believe in giving everyone a square deal—in being honest—it's my religion—I want to do what is right—that's why I am making you the broadest, most straightforward, fairest, most liberal one-sided offer, ever made. When I have confidence enough in my treatment to send it to you this way, I know you'll be willing to try it at my expense—that's all I ask. Don't send me any money. Don't even send me a postage stamp—just write name and address and where to send the free trial. Address: DR. H. MICHELL DeWERTH, 122 Lexoid Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

PICK HARVARD TO BEAT YALE AT ICE HOCKEY

The Harvard and Yale hockey team clash in the first game of their series at the Arena tonight and a slashing contest is expected by the "fans." The Crimson seven has been putting up a brilliant game lately and it is expected to win.

Harvard started the season with a rush. The Crimson team soon lost its form and played a ragged game. In its last three games, however, Harvard has played a whirlwind game. It defeated the crack Toronto University seven by the score of 2 to 0, beat the Princeton Tigers in an overtime battle, and swamped the Amherst Aggies.

Like Harvard, "the mumps" has affected the Yale team. Yale will be without the services tonight of Gore, in the point position, for this clever player was unable to accompany the team to Boston. His absence from the game has necessitated a change at the last moment in the Elis lineup, but Captain Harman expressed himself today as confident that this would not seriously affect the chances of the Yale team. Martin will play point instead of coverpoint, his regular position, and Cox will replace Martin, going from the centre position.

Ordway will play centre. McDonald will start at right wing for the New Haven men, as Chauncey has not fully recovered from an injury to his leg. Should it be necessary, however, Chauncey may get into the game.

A record crowd will witness the game. Dr. George W. Tingley of this city and Billy Russell of New York will be the officials.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

IT is to be supposed we all like to read how other people make money although we are not all able to make it ourselves. In spite of what people may think of President Murphy of the Chicago Club, he is always on the job and always has his eyes open for ways to turn a penny. He seldom loses any tricks. Here is his latest:

Some time ago he arranged with the citizens of Tampa, Fla., whereby said citizens were to pay the training expenses of the Chicago team in return for the honor of having the team train at Tampa. That would seem to be a pretty fair business arrangement on the part of Mr. Murphy, but it is now learned that the Chicago magnate has arranged to bring home a slice of bacon as well.

Recently rail and boat connections have been made by which one may go from Tampa to Havana in quick time. Murphy has evolved a scheme whereby he can ship a team over to Havana for Sunday games. Games between the Cubs and the two leading teams of Havana would draw about $24,000 in two games.

Aside from the money consideration there is the fine practice to be taken into account. The Cubans would fight their heads off to defeat the Cubs. On the whole, Mr. Murphy must be given credit for clever planning.

WHEN the Red Sox go South early in March, the squad that starts from Boston will not tarry a day in Cincinnati, as has been the custom in past years. President McAleer wishes to rush the squad right through without stops. That will mean that the delegation will leave New York on Friday night at 6 o'clock and arrive at Cincinnati at 5:15 the next day. The train out of Cincinnati leaves at 6 and is due at Hot Springs at 3:45 Sunday afternoon. It is planned to start practice on Monday morning.

WHAT do you know about violet uniforms for the Giants? Violet stockings, violet belts, violet caps. That is the layout as planned by Manager McGraw for home wear. Whether this color will be taken on the road has not yet developed.

Some queer events have been pulled off in the uniform line. Nearly thirty years ago old Cap Anson conceived the idea that each of his players should wear a cap of different color. That didn't last long. Next the old fellow came along with a new stunt. It was nothing less than making his players don claw-hammer evening dress coats over their uniforms. They would ride from the hotel to the grounds in these togs and at a given signal march on the diamond, wheel in soldierly fashion and march to the bench. There they would peel off the spike-tails and, run on the field for practice. It was a rather inspiring stunt.

Some years later the New York Giants, under Muttie, adopted skin-tight black, Jersey uniforms. They were all right, but hard on the baseballers.

IF now looks as though President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club would get the special opening he has been working for, and if present plans go through the new Ebbets Field will be the scene of the first National league game of the year on April 9. Ebbets will really have two openings, for on April 5 Frank Chance's New York American league team will play an exhibition game with the Dodgers. There will be appropriate ceremonies for this exhibition game, including a band concert and speechmaking. At the real opening Ebbets plans to have every baseball man of prominence on hand, together with Governor Sulzer, Mayor Gaynor and other dignitaries. The Phillies will be the opponents of the Brooklyn club. Later there will be "dedication day," when the same kind of ceremonies will make the turnstiles click merrily.

IF Eddie Plank, the clever Southpaw of Connie Mack's staff of pitchers, makes good his word and retires to his farm, the energized manager of the Athletics will be hard put to it. Mack is so worried over Plank's failure to sign a contract that he has signified his intention of taking a trip to Gettysburg, Pa., where Plank makes his home, in order to use a little persuasion on the veteran lefter.

We in Boston would be just as well pleased if Plank would retire. He has always been a mighty hard man for the Red Sox to beat.

ARTHUR SHAFER has returned unsigned a second contract sent to him by Manager McGraw of the Giants. It looks very much as though he was in earnest when he said he would retire from baseball and devote his time to the automobile business. McGraw will considerably worried over the matter. In Shafer he developed a star who would become his regular shortstop this year. The youngster showed sensational form in the few innings he played in the world's series.

Shafer is the son of the Boston Nationals would-be owner, Harold Page, then vice-president of the organization, had not blocked the deal, crabbing he was a much inferior man to Shafer, the former Boston second baseman.

COAST ATHLETES REFUSE TRIP TO AUSTRALIA

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

Quarter Mile Champion of United States and Canada.

A few months ago athletic followers throughout the country were stirred by the report that the American Athletic Union of Australia was to finance a trip of Pacific Coast athletes to the Antipodes. According to reports in recent copies of papers received from Australia, the reason given for the cancellation of the trip was the refusal of Forrest Smithson, the Pacific Coast hurdler, to make the trip.

While this is the only reason assigned, it appears that the American athletes are afraid that they would not be financed for a trip to Australia.

The Pacific Coast athletes "would not be afraid to make the trip, as Richard Coombs, the Australian promoter, has guaranteed them their expenses. His character is well known and if the Yankee stars visit the land of the Southern Cross, every courtesy will be extended to them while there.

Probably no happening of late years has caused more regret or disappointment to the athletes of Australia than the postponement of the proposed tour of American athletes, and nowhere is the feeling more marked than in New Zealand. The time is just ripe for such a visit which promised to be a success both from a financial and athletic viewpoint. James E. Sullivan, head of the Amateur Athletic Union, has given his sanction for the event and was quite enthusiastic about the matter.

Sullivan, in a talk with the Australian representative who was in this country, suggested securing a team from the East or from the whole country at large. Thus the Australians could see the best athletic team in the world in action. He declared that it would undoubtedly be a greater boost to amateur athletics in America than any other scheme that could be devised. Plans for the trip were in the hands of William Unmack of San Francisco.

The only way out of the difficulty would be to put the matter in the hands of James E. Sullivan. This would ensure the sanction of the A. A. U. and the athletes of the East would be elated at the chances of the proposed tour.

TENNIS LEADERS PLAN NEW RULES

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The revision committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association has sent a letter to association members explaining a new and perfect rule regarding amateur standing proposed for discussion at the annual meeting here February 14. This rule would forbid amateurs to accept from any hotel, club or similar organization at which a tournament is to be held, transportation, board or lodging, or any secret or exceptional reduced rate in connection with the tournament.

BAIN IS FIRST IN PITTSBURGH RACE

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 1.—John Bain of the Pittsburgh A. A. won the 220-yard swimming contest here. His time was 2m. 51 3-5s. Bain took this honor from Wylie Stoge of the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. by six inches in the dust heat and qualified as the champion in this class in the Middle Atlantic section of the A. A. U. This event was the only one of importance to the A. A. U. contestants as it was really a preliminary to the national championship race at this distance which will be held here in the Spring.

BERGEN DEFEATED IN BOUT WITH HENRY

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Tommy Bergen, the Lewiston bearcat, was clearly outpointed by Kid Henry of Troy in every one of the ten rounds before the Albany A. C. Bergen was the aggressor, but after leading he was quick to cover up and this saved him from being put away. Bergen was on the verge of a knockout four times, his covering preventing Henry from following up his advantages.

Harvard Wants "Less Exacting Contests," Asserts Garcelon

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 1.—The Dartmouth Athletic Council has received the official notification from Harvard that Dartmouth would not appear on the Harvard football schedule for 1913 owing to Harvard's wish to arrange "a less exacting series of contests." Harvard's announcement came from William F. Garcelon, graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association.

Harold C. McAllister, graduate manager of the Dartmouth Athletic Association, has issued the following statement:

An official communication from William F. Garcelon, graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, has been received today, stating that it will be impossible for Harvard to play Dartmouth in football next Fall. The letter, after emphasizing the cordial relations which have always existed between Harvard and Dartmouth, states that the Advisory Committee concluded to make this change because of the desirability of arranging a "less exacting series of contests."

We have answered this letter to the effect that we greatly regret the loss of a game which has stood so high in the estimation of our undergraduate and alumni bodies for a period of years. We shall, of course, be glad to rearrange our schedule, which we fear will be a difficult matter, in view of the fact that the schedules of most of the colleges are already complete.

(Signed) HAROLD C. McALLISTER, Graduate Manager.

It is interesting, in view of the upward trend in the price of gasoline, to note that chemists in England are working on a series of new fuels which are derived from gasoline, benzoline, paraffin and alcohol. It is said that consumers varying from 26 to 90 per cent. have been effected by the use of these fuels. The cost of producing them is not more than one-eighteen of a cent a gallon.

The experiments have thus far been tried on an internal combustion engine, driving an electric lighting set. For a motor car no difficulty would arise in the existing form of carburetor is required, save the reduction of the size of inlet to approximately one-half its original size. Absence of odor is one of the benefits claimed for the new fuels.

Hughey Duffy Awarded Fall River Franchise by Baseball Owners

Hugh Duffy, the former Boston National League star and ex-major and minor league baseball manager, has been awarded the franchise of the Fall River team by the New England League officials. The Fall River team, according to an announcement by the National Commission, will be removed to Portland, Me.

Frank J. Leonard of Lynn, Charles D. McLaughlin and J. P. Conroy of Cambridge tried to get the Fall River franchise, but after all the claims had been heard the officials voted, practically unanimously, in favor of Duffy. The inability of Fall River to meet expenses last year is the reason given for removing the team elsewhere.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW TO OPEN TONIGHT WITH BIG FEATURES

For ten years the New England Engine and Boat Association has held its annual Motor Boat and Engine Show in Boston, each year growing larger and better. More interest has been shown this year than ever before, with the result that when the doors are opened to the public this evening, Mechanics Building will contain the finest collection of motor boats, engines and accessories ever assembled under one roof.

Manager Chester I. Campbell has also been fortunate this year in being able to obtain many added attractions that will appeal to every boat lover. Everybody knows of the wonderful achievement of Captain Thomas Fleming Day, the editor and publisher of Rudder. Captain Day, with his two companions, embarked on the "Detroit," the little Thirty-five-foot motor boat in Detroit, Michigan, and successfully crossed the Atlantic to Russia. This is one of the most remarkable feats in motor boat history, and the thrilling story will be told by Captain Day in four illustrated lectures on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Another attraction will be the fastest motor boat, hydroplane type, in the world, the Baby Reliance II. This wonderful little twenty-foot speed boat has won practically every championship the past season and she, together with her great collection of trophies, will be here for the first time in the East.

There will also be shown every conceivable type of boat from the fourteen-foot dory with its one horse power engine up to the big semi-cruisers with every comfort possible, electric lights, baths and refrigerators, as well as the well-known engines and the comfort giving and safety devices of the accessory manufacturers.

THORPE TO SIGN CONTRACT WITH GIANTS TODAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Jim Thorpe, the wonderful Carlisle athlete who was recently declared a professional, has signed a contract to play with the New York Giants this year and will go South with the first squad of McGraw's men. The news that the Indian wonder is to play here has caused great joy among the local "fans."

John B. Foster, secretary of the club, has issued the following statement:

"I have received a telegram from Thorpe saying that he has accepted the contract we offered him. He is, therefore, our player. The telegram added that Thorpe would come to New York with the contract at once and would formally sign it today."

Mr. Foster declined to say what salary had been offered the Indian. It is understood, however, that Thorpe will be paid approximately $7,500 a year.

"Thorpe will be here today at 2 o'clock, when, at the club's offices, he will sign a contract to play with the Giants," said Manager John J. McGraw. He added that he first thought of engaging Thorpe, when the publicity given the Indian's disbarment from the amateur Athletic Union and the statement that several Western managers were trying to sign him, put the idea into the minds of both.

"I got Thorpe on the long-distance telephone in Carlisle, Pa.," said McGraw, "and he accepted my offer. Later I got a telegram from him confirming his verbal acceptance. He preferred to come to New York and I offered him more money than the others, too."

Manager McGraw said that the matter of salary was a private transaction and that he would say nothing about it.

"Thorpe ought to make a good all-around man," McGraw added. "I expect that he will accompany the team South when the Spring training season opens, and then we'll try him out and see where he can do his best work."

James E. Sullivan, secretary of the A. A. U., has announced that he had received the challenge trophies won by Thorpe in the Olympic Games last year, and would send them today to Kristian Hellstrom, secretary of the Swedish Olympic committee.

Mr. Sullivan said also that the all-round trophy won by Thorpe at Celtic Park last September had been sent from Carlisle with the Olympic trophies, and is now in the possession of the A. A. U. It will go to John Bredemus, formerly of Princeton University, who was second to Thorpe in the Celtic Park games.

THORPE IN NEW YORK TO MEET MANAGER M'GRAW OF GIANTS

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Jim Thorpe, the Indian athlete, accompanied by Glen Warner, coach of the Carlisle School athletic squads, arrived here this morning from Carlisle, Pa., with an appointment to meet Manager McGraw to sign the contract that will make him a member of the team. McGraw today would not say what price he had offered Thorpe, but when gagnes were made in the neighborhood of $5,000 he said: "That's pretty close."

If Thorpe shows any pitching skill in the Spring workouts of the Giants he will be trained for slab duty. If not, McGraw will groom him for first base or the outfield, although it is quite likely that Thorpe will not become a regular until next year.

Meredith Is Willing to Meet Halpin at Big B. A. A. Games

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 1.—"Ted" Meredith, the speedy Penn, freshman, who won the "Suburban quarter" in New York Wednesday night, says that he is eager to meet Tom Halpin, the crack B. A. A. flier, who finished in second place in the Gotham event, in a special race at the B. A. A. indoor meet this month. Meredith said:

"I never felt better in my life than I do now, and I am perfectly willing to test my speed against any man in the world in a race from 400 yards to 1,000 yards. Halpin is a rorking good performer and he gave me a hard battle for the premier honors in New York, but I am certain that I am his master.

"As yet I have received no invitation to compete in the games of the Boston club and so will not do anything about the matter. But if the Boston A. A. wants to stage a race between Halpin and myself everything is all right, as far as I am concerned at least."

BOSTON LATIN LOSES MEET TO DORCHESTER

The Boston Latin and Dorchester High School track teams fought it out yesterday afternoon in an indoor track meet, and when the smoke from the scrimmage cleared was the winner with a score of 44 to 35. The meet was held at the Dorchester High "gym," and was attended by a large crowd of the follo ers of both school teams. It was fought out on even terms, and the outcome was ever in doubt.

COMMERCE WINNER IN TRACK MEET

The High School of Commerce track team defeated the Mechanic Arts High School track team yesterday afternoon at the new Commerce board track in the Fenway, by a score of 68 to 43. It was the first meet ever held on the new track and was christened by a victory that was earned after a hard fight.

KIRBY IS REFEREE AT B. A. A. MEET

Gustavus Kirby, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, and James E. Sullivan, the greatest authority on amateur athletics in this country, will be the referees of the Boston Athletic Association indoor track meet to be held in Mechanics Hall, one week from tonight. Kirby will be an honorary referee and Sullivan an active official.

The demand for seats for the games exceeds anything in the past, and judging by the sale thus far to the members, the public, as in the past, will have little chance.

WHELAN SELECTED TO COACH TUFTS

Dr. Charles H. Whelan, coach of the Tufts football team the past season, has been reappointed for next year by the athletic advisory board. The outlook for next season is excellent. Dr. Whelan will have back every one of his last year's team, except Adams, fullback. The board decided not to approve the baseball schedule until several pending games are definitely settled. The selection of baseball coach was also postponed.

DINEEN REWARDED FOR GOOD WORK

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—The baseball umpire who is a man of few words has won a reward. President Johnson of the American league has mailed a check for $200 to Bill Dineen, considered by many the quietest and least talkative umpire in the big leagues. The reason for this prize was that Bill had succeeded in handling baseball games last season with less waste of time than any other man on the job.

WISCONSIN WANTS A BOXING LAW

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 1. — A bill to legalize boxing in Wisconsin, has been introduced into the Wisconsin Legislature. It provides for a State Boxing Commission of three, appointed by the Governor, and is patterned after the New York law. The bill limits contests to 10-rounds with five-ounce gloves.

PIPE DREAMS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

JIM THORPE.

In the land of Hiawatha
There is weeping, there is wailing,
There is gnashing of the molars,
As they read the sporting extra,
All the scalps that he has gathered
By the fjords of far-off Sweden,
All the sculptocks and the trophies
They have taken from his wigwam.
He was but a simple redskin,
And he gathered in the wampum
Just as all the rest are doing;
But he gathered in the open
And they captured his angora
And they handed him the flaware.
I have mingled with the paleface,
I have seen and read him deeply,
But his amateur athletics
Is a stunt I am not wise to.
But as far as I can fathom
All the athletes sing this chorus:
"We are purer than the snowdrift
Till they get the goods upon us."

Jim Thorpe is accused to lose a flock of trophies, but he deserves a vote of thanks for refusing to infest the stage.

* * *

Mr. Snodgrass will get a raise this season, but we always suspected that Colonel Roosevelt's depredations in Africa would boost the price of ivory.

* * *

Possibly Mr. Thorpe would still be an amateur if he had learned the art of throwing the ball.

* * *

After investigating our amateur athletes, why not investlante a few of the professional guardians of amateurism who was wealthy thereby?

* * *

As we understand it, the difference between boxing and prize fighting depends largely on the political influence of the promoters.

* * *

A scientist bursts in with the information that there are 125,000 idiots at large in this fair land. Boxing promoters have always worked on that theory.

* * *

Baseball historians tell us that Detroit once was on the point of sending Ty Cobb to the Browns. But Bill Armour butted in and prevented him from going to the minors.

* * *

The report that the Brooklyn team is composed almost exclusively of Southerners is enlightening. It explains why said team always finishes at the southern end of the percentage column.

* * *

Dick Kiegin, who threatens to form a baseball league in Europe, reminds us that Jules Verne also had a beetle imagination.

* * *

Mike Doolan has taken up the study of dentistry, possibly on the theory that getting money out of a magnate is somewhat like pulling teeth.

Tom Jones and Emil Thiry are talking over a McFarland-Wolgast conflict, but Emil hasn't a chance in the world unless he has a handicap of at least seven chapters.

BOSTON COLLEGE TO HOLD TRACK GAMES TONIGHT

Many prominent schoolboy, club and college athletes will compete in the Boston College track meet which will be held at the college gymnasium on St. James street this evening. There will not be any champions in the various events but nevertheless there is sure to be plenty of good racing.

In the twenty-five-yard dash, in which more than fifty men are entered, the scratch man is Charley Ries, the Powder Point flier. Ries was picked to win this event last year, but several good men had an advantage over him in the handicap. The other low men are: Phelan, North Dorchester, one foot; Hiney, B. A. A., one foot; Snow, B. A. A., one foot, and Leo McCarthy, Boston College High, two feet.

The low men in the 440-yard run are Phelan, North Dorchester A. A., 9 yards; G. A. Sullivan, B. A. A., 12 yards; Fred Kingsbury, Quincy High, 13 yards, and Alfred Retiler, Boston College High, 16 yards. All the other entrants have good-sized handicaps, Reiley is the Boston College favorite, but Sullivan and Kingsbury will give him go his fastest to win.

Good Men in Half Mile.

The 880-yard run will have as its lowmark men, H. Mahoney, B. A. A., scratch; G. "Dutch" Allen, Powder Point, 10 yards; L. Powell, North Dorchester A. A.; N. E. Horne, North Dorchester A. A., and J. J. Cook, Brookline "Gym," 20 yards each. The Boston College High favorites in this race are Tom Burke and Simmons, who have been making good time in practice. Burke won this race last year and is out to repeat.

J. O. Johnstone, Harvard, is scratch man in the high jump and will have as his low men against him, A. W. Moffat, Harvard, 1 inch; L. S. Hall, M. I. T., 3 inches, and A. D. Chandler, Harvard, 4 inches.

The Boston College men in this event are Bryan and Lynch of the college, O'Connor of the prep school, all having good inside caps.

H. Mahoney of the B. A. A. is also scratch man in the mile run and J. Cudmore, 25 yards, is another low mark man. Tom Lilley, North Dorchester A. A., and Dempsey, Dorchester, who entered late and Leo McGovern, captain of the Boston College team are the favorites in this event, which is always one of the most keenly contested races of the meet.

All members of the Boston College and High School track teams have been entered, and as they have always been prominent among the prize winners in the past, the student body are of the opinion that this year will proves no exception.

There are many relay races scheduled, and some keen contests are expected when old rivals clash. The Boston College team will meet the Coast Artillery four, and the prep team will run against the Mechanic Arts High team. Both of these races ought to be good ones, with the Boston College teams as the favorites.

MANY GOOD MATCHES IN SQUASH TOURNEY AT UNICORN CLUB

Two matches in the tournament for the individual championship of the Massachusetts Squash Racquet Association were played at the B. A. A. yesterday afternoon.

Johnny Reynolds, the professional at the B. A. A., and Billy Ganley, the professional at the Tennis and Racquet Club, will play their annual squash racquet match on the courts of the B. A. A. this afternoon.

The summary:

H. Pingeon, Newton Centre, beat K. L. Lindsay, B. A. A., 12—15, 15—10, 11—15, 15—11, 15—12.

A. Brand, Union B. C., beat C. Frothingham, Tennis and Racquet, 12—15, 15—10, 12—15, 15—12, 18—17.

A. Brand, in the Junior B. A. A. squash racquet handicap tournament, now decided, beat C. C. Tower beat A. Kent, 15—18, 16—6, 12—15, 18—17, 18—15. Brand gave 2 aces.

L. B. Harding, Jr., beat J. B. Nightingale, 6—15, 18—17, 17—15, 15—12. Harding gave 4 aces.

In the junior tennis handicap tournament S. Merrill beat A. Rodman, 6—2, 6—4. Merrill gave 15.

OSCAR HEDLUND

OSCAR HEDLUND, the former Brookline track star, is undoubtedly the best miler ever turned out in New England, and ranks with any athlete in the country. Hedlund started running while at the Brookline schools, and has been one of the leading candidates for track honors in the United States for the last four years.

At the National track and field championships of the New England A. A. U. in 1909, Hedlund surprised the critics by winning the half-mile run from Frank P. Sheehan of the South Boston A. C. It was the first time that Sheehan had been defeated in a championship meeting.

Hedlund did not, however, survive as a half-miler, for in the Summer of that year he was defeated in a scratch half-mile at the St. Augustine's track meet, Sheehan won the event with Lonergan, the Dublin record holder, second. Hedlund was a bad third.

His next appearance on the track found him competing in the mile event, and from then on he has made good as a miler.

In 1911 Hedlund won the New England mile-and-a-half championships and secured second place to Kiviat in the mile championship at Pittsburgh. Last Winter, Oscar equalled the world's indoor mile record at Troy, covering the distance in 4m. 19 4-5s.

Since his return from the Olympic games, Hedlund has had little competition till last Saturday evening, when he defeated Norman Taber of Brown, in the mile race at the military games.

Hedlund is the man on whom the Boston followers are pinning their hopes to win the special scratch mile at the B. A. A. games on February 8.

Nelson Will Quit Ring and Travel, States New Bride

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 1.—Battling Nelson will cease to be a prize fighter as soon as engagements already signed for, are finished. This is the positive statement of his bride, formerly Fay King, who has arrived here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack King.

"Bat" Nelson is going to quit the ring," she declared in a firm tone. "He has a few fights scheduled, and he really can't back out of them, but after that he is going to stop. I love him just as he is without more honors, although"—here defiantly—"I think that he is a good enough fighter right now to give Willie Ritchie an awful fight, and may be knock him out.

"But wants to see the world before we settle down and talks of taking me to Australia and even up to Copenhagen, Denmark, where he was born."

TUFTS PLAYS BROWN ELEVEN NOVEMBER 22

The Tufts College football schedule has been approved by the Advisory Board of the college Athletic Association. Manager Francis A. Maulsby of West Somerville has arranged a list of nine games, five of which will be played at Medford.

The schedule contains a number of surprising changes. The final game will be with Brown at Providence, instead of with Trinity. The schedule:

Sept. 27, Bates at Medford; Oct. 4, New Hampshire State at Medford; Oct. 11, Worcester Middletown; Oct. 18, University of Maine at Medford; Oct. 25, West Point at West Point; Nov. 1, Massachusetts Agricultural at Medford; Nov. 8, Rutland Vermont at Medford; Nov. 15, Bowdoin at Portland; Nov. 22, Brown at Providence.

WILL SUE CUBS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Miss A. Dobbin declared today that she would vigorously push her $25,000 suit against the Chicago National League Club for injuries received when a foul tip hit her in one eye while she was a spectator at one of the games last season.

DARTMOUTH AND CARLISLE MAY BATTLE HERE

Major J. Edward Barry of Cambridge has come forward as another champion of the Dartmouth football eleven. Barry is trying to arrange for a game between Dartmouth and Carlisle to be played at Cambridge next Fall.

Cambridge's Mayor has already opened negotiations with the athletic authorities at Hanover and those at Carlisle. He plans to stage the contest on the new Russell Field in North Cambridge which will be opened for athletic purposes in the Spring.

Russell Field will be one of the best places in the East to hold athletic contests. The field will be enclosed and will have a seating capacity of 7,500.

It will also be possible to build 8,000 temporary seats in case a Dartmouth-Carlisle game is arranged. In discussing the matter Mayor Barry said:

"It is true that negotiations have been started which may result in the bringing Dartmouth and Carlisle together at Cambridge. I am convinced that we could easily handle a crowd of at least 20,000 people at Russell Field. The management of the two teams would be assured of ideal police protection, while the field is so located that it could easily be reached by the public.

"The teams could divide the money taken in at the gate evenly. I believe that if $1 or $1.25 were charged for a ticket that a great crowd will turn out in order to witness the battle."

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

DEC. 26.—The day has been a happy one for Manette, and when the child is in a house to keep its elders are very selfish if they let their troubles intrude.

I think the thought of Elizabeth has been uppermost with all of us all day, and the first evidence that she is remembered was shown by Richards last evening when she hung a pair of tiny stockings at the foot of Manette's bed.

"I can't forget that last year there were two pair," she said, wiping her tears away.

When I went out to the cemetery this morning before Manette was awake, I found that, early as it was, there had been some one ahead of me. Tompkins, I know, for I had seen his clumsy fingers tying the flowers together the evening before.

When I returned there was a little picture of Elizabeth, framed on every, in my place, from Richards, who knew what would please me most, and I have it here on my library table as I write.

Such a dainty little girl, and with such wit, withal, too. It seems to me now that if we had not been blind in our love we would have known that a child with such a look of longing in its eyes was never given on earth to remain long.

Her picture on the dining room wall was framed in little white rose buds, and Mrs. Spencer had hung them there while I was gone. Truly, the memory of the child that is gone is more precious on a day like this than the thought of the child that is living.

We had the tree in the morning, and it seemed such a selfish thing that two households should gather to watch one child receive enough gifts for fifty children, that we had a second tree in the afternoon.

And on that hastily decorated tree there hung gifts for all the poor little neglected waifs the conchmen of the two households could find, some fifty-odd children, cold and half starved, many so small their mothers accompanied them, and all looking dazed at the manner in which the Christmas saint remembered them. We had a big dinner for them afterward, and sent them home late in the afternoon, a happy, excited crowd.

The Spencers took charge and found genuine happiness in ministering to my strange guests' wants. The sight of so many strangers, all attired in a way that must have reminded my little girl of her tragic experience, caused her to cling so tightly to me that I had to content myself in sitting off in a corner, and before the party was half over I carried her upstairs to her room.

Again I found I have no rivals, for the French doll with the furs that cost fifty dollars was thrown forgotten on the floor, and a tired little head snuggled close to my cheek, and, without any solicitation, she told me with no sense of unkindly shame that I was "her lovinest one," and when she grew up she was going to be my mamma, and she wasn't going to let me play with any little girls 'cause I might love them.

After this declaration of love we had tea in the nursery, and when sleepy time came I encouraged her to talk about Elizabeth. I want the memory of the child to keep space with her as she grows up. It will be good for her, even though it may occasionally sadden her, to remember always the perfect soul of her sister.

After she had fallen asleep, I went over to the Spencers and told them about the widow. Mrs. Spencer has promised to come down in February to look her over.

"But I know it is not serious, Max," she said with a laugh. "If it were serious, my warnings would make you indignant, instead of causing you so much amusement."

"Take particular note of Warning No. 13."

I looked at Warning No. 13 when I reached home. I will not write it here now, Diary. You are getting too much amusement out of me as it is. But I am sure I will write it later.

Safe Hints

When tired of sweet jellies and jams, try honey for undressed chops and tarts. Heat well together one cupful of sugar, one egg and butter size of a walnut. Add juice and grated rind of one lemon. Stir well, put into a double boiler, cook slowly till thick, avoid stirring after it begins to cook. Add tiny pinch of salt.

Bamboo furniture should be scrubbed with water and salt. Don't make wetter than is absolutely necessary, and dry in the open air as soon as possible.

Those who live in small houses, and whose bedroom or kitchen doors lack finger plates, may be glad to make use of the following hint: Cut out two pieces of colored linoleum, without pattern, to the shape of ordinary finger plates, and fix them on the door with brass-headed nails. They are capital substitutes for real finger plates, and prevent unsightly finger marks.

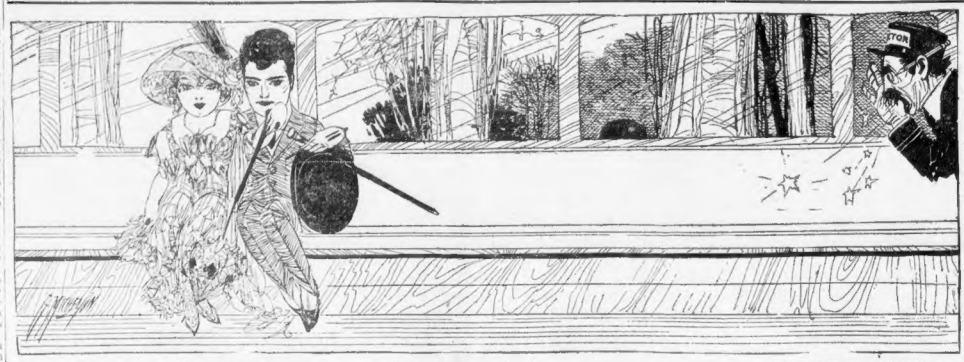
Sandpaper can be kept perfectly dry and in good working condition by rolling it and keeping it in a wide-mouthed jar and screwing down the lid, and the very best method of keeping small screws, brads and tacks from rusting is to place them in small, widemouthed bottles, tightly corked. The bottles should be perfectly dry before using.

Tomatoes should always be skinned before being used for salad. To do this easily place the fruit in a basin and pour boiling water over; let it stand a minutes. You will then find that the skin can be removed without any trouble.

After peeling onions rub a stick of celery over the hands, and the unpleasant stinging smell will at once disappear.

The Wonder Girl and Jack Get the Worth of Their Carfare

DRAWN BY G. MICHELSON



You have journeyed through city highways,
'Mid the city's clash and roar,
But to you 'twas a trip through Heaven
To a fair and dream-sweet shore.

You have talked—oh, a lot of nonsense,
That isn't important at all;
But you THOUGHT that a world was hanging
On the words that you let fall.

You have looked at a million people,
But the only things you've seen
Are the eyes of the Other Person,
With the love-glow in between.

Your home's in a teeming city,
In the midst of the human crew,
But you LIVE in a world of starlight—
A world that was built for two.

You have heard no call of warning;
You have passed your place by miles,
For your ears were filled with music.
In fact, you have just begun.

And your eyes were filled with smiles.
And now you are leagues from Nowhere,
At the end of the happy run;
But you haven't finished your gabbing;
It's from the very beginning.

And you're just so delightfully silly
That if you must walk back home,
You'll think it's the best lark ever
And laugh as you gayly roam.

Oh, may you be still at your spooning
At the end of the Life Car's route,
Till Death calls sharp in the station:
"It's the end of the line—all out!"

Married Life the Third Year

Helen Buys an Imported Gown at a January Stock-Taking Sale

"OH, yes, at the end of the season they all show the handling," admitted the saleswoman, as she carelessly threw a dingy chiffon evening gown on the chair with half a dozen others. "We can't show them to a string of customers every day and keep them fresh."

"But the beads are all coming off this one," protested Helen, picking up a pearl bead from the floor.

"That's why it's reduced so much. That was one of our best French models," glancing at the ticket. "It's been marked down from $185 to $75. This one's in better condition," pulling out one from underneath, "but of course it hasn't been worn as much—$85 from $110.

"Yes, but that pink's too deep and the trimming too heavy," criticised Helen. "I like this much better," taking up the pale pink, hardly more than flesh-colored chiffon.

"Suppose we take some of these in the fitting room and try them on?" suggested the saleswoman.

Helen hesitated. She always felt that if she tried on a thing she was in a way under obligation to buy it. She had no sympathy with women who, regardless of the time of the clerk and the wear on the gowns themselves, would try on half a dozen models and then calmly walk off, complaining that none of them was quite what they wanted."

Trying on the Gowns

But the saleswoman had already thrown the gowns over her arm and now led the way to a fitting room nearby. Helen followed reluctantly.

"We'll try this one first," briskly holding up the gown Helen had favored. "Yes, you'd better take off your waist, too. You can't tell anything about it unless you do."

As the saleswoman hooked up the gown Helen gazed in the long mirror with thrilled surprise. She could hardly realize that the vision reflected there was really herself. The gown was exquisitely beautiful, and the pale pink chiffon and pearl beads brought out the satiny fairness of her bare neck and arms.

But she had never paid as much as $75 for an evening gown, and to pay that for one in this condition! It was undoubtedly soiled and many of the beads were off. Besides, it was too large, the whole dress would have to be altered.

"We can easily alter that to fit you," declared the saleslady, as Helen took up both sides of the waist to show its looseness. "And that delicate coloring suits you perfectly."

"What would you charge for the alterations?"

"I can't tell you exactly—the fitter will have to see it—but it will be about $8."

That would make the dress $83! Helen was thinking fast. Could she pay that much? What would Warren say?

"Now this one is almost your size and would need very little altering," holding up the gown of deeper pink.

"Oh, no; I don't care for that at all," for to Helen it looked almost cheap and gaudy beside the pale delicateness of the one she had on.

Helen Decides

"You could alter that yourself," suggested the saleswoman. "I'll have one of the fitters come in and pin it up on you. And those beads," as she saw Helen examining a place where a whole strand was off; "I'm sure you can match those downstairs."

"Very well—I'll take it," said Helen finally, with a sort of desperation, for all Winter she had waited to get an evening gown at this January stock-taking sale. "If you'll have it pinned up I'll try to alter it myself."

In a few moments the saleswoman returned with the fitter.

"I'm afraid I'll have to rip that skirt off, ma'am, to pin it up right. You see, it's much too long waisted."

With practiced fingers she ripped off the skirt, took up the seams of the waist and shoulders, pinned back the skirt at a higher waist line, taking in the darts around the hips to fit Helen's slenderness.

For almost an hour Helen stood while the clever little Frenchwoman practically made over the dress on her—and all with pins.

"Now, you'll have to be very careful," she warned, "so that the pins won't come out before you can get it sewed. Let me help you take it off—it may be pinned through."

Helen, who could hardly wait to get to work on the dress, decided to take it home with her instead of having it sent. As it was very soft and sheer, it was easily packed in a small box, and in less than an hour she had it home and spread out on the table.

Helen's Difficult Task

It was fairly bristling with pins, some of which she had to take out to get at those underneath. Others had fallen out and many had slipped and were merely hanging by the point, so she could not tell how much had been taken in. Many of the beads, too, came off as she worked.

She realized that the dress was in far worse condition than she had thought, and that even if she could get it to fit her, the material was too delicate to ever give much service.

When she finally spread a sheet before her dresser and tried it on to see the effect of her work, she found that the whole waist was askew. The loosened pins had not been good guides. She took it off and ripped out most of what she had done. Then she found she would have to take the skirt entirely off and alter the waist alone before she put it back.

Of course, she did not speak to Warren about the dress that evening, for he would have wanted to see it, and there would have been little to show for her seventy-five dollars. For a gown, however exquisite, when it is ripped up looks most unimpressive, and in its disjointed stage the soiled chiffon and the frayed beads were much more conspicuous.

That night Helen slept very little, for she was in the throes of regret that she had bought the gown, an anguish that at some time every woman knows. She had visions of all the other gowns, fresh, serviceable gowns, that she might have bought for seventy-five dollars.

Toward morning she fell into a troubled sleep, to dream that she was wearing the gown at some formal dinner, and the beads, which seemed as big as billiard balls, kept falling off and rolling over the table.

"What's the matter with you?" questioned Warren at breakfast. "Don't look very chipper, do you?"

"Oh, I didn't sleep very well. It must be this damp, murky weather."

As soon as Warren was safely off Helen again got to work on the gown, beginning now at the very foundation. It took her fully three days before she finally got it "right," and still another day to sew on the beads. They were all sewed with a single thread, and when one came off more would follow. So she resewed them all and bought eight new strands to replace those that had been lost.

She had had the dress charged, and as this fell due the first week of the month she had been anxious to get it finished, so that Warren might see it before he received the bill.

Warren Is Pleased

"Dear, you know I've been needing a new evening gown all Winter," was the way she brought up the subject that night after dinner. "So I've bought one at Hallman's—you know how they reduce everything there just before they take stock. It's really very beautiful, I think. Don't you want to see it?"

"All right," indifferently. "Trot it out."

"Shall I put it on?" shyly. "You can tell more about it."

He nodded, without looking up from his paper, and she hurried in to her room. She dressed throughout, even to her white satin slippers, for she wanted his first view of the gown to be an effective one.

Her cheeks were flushed and her eyes bright with excitement, and even Maggie stared with surprise at the charming vision when Helen called her in to hook the gown.

There was enough of the actress in Helen's nature for her to instinctively plan to make the entrance before Warren a dramatic one. So when she finally trailed in she stood motionless in the doorway until he looked up, knowing the darkened room beyond made an effective background.

She was thrillingly conscious of the quick admiration in his eyes as they rested upon her.

"Why Kitten!" as he jumped up and came toward her.

"Isn't it lovely?" she lurched happily.

"It's stunning! You've never had anything so becoming."

"I've never had an imported evening gown before."

"Turn around," he demanded.

Slowly she turned around, trailing the full length of the room.

"It was really a hundred and eighty-five dollars at the beginning of the season," she explained, "but it had been marked down to seventy-five. I don't you think that was cheap for it?"

"I should say it was! That's the best looking gown I've seen. And it's not a bad looking little woman in it, either," as he stooped to kiss her bare shoulder.

And Helen felt then, even though the gown would never be a serviceable one, that the seventy-five dollars and all her work and worry had been well expended.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOWS

By HOWELL POOLE

A Thrilling Story of Life in a Great City

PART II.

(Concluded.)

AT the hotel Mr. and Mrs. Matherson awaited the return of General Brittlebank.

"My dear Miss Ruth, believe me when I say the girl must have been laboring under some delusion. If she had spoken truly, why is not Wentworth found? She even fancied you were some one else," Mr. Matherson was saying.

"But if the girl were really mad," she replied, "why did she cry aloud on seeing me: 'Her face—the face of the locket—the lady he loves!'"

"Yes, why did she cry out that, Mr. Matherson?" asked his wife.

"I can't imagine," he replied.

Mrs. Matherson Spiteful

"You never can," said Mrs. Matherson, spitefully. "It is plain to me this fellow was some impostor, and that it was no idle fancy of the girl's. Conviction was in every feature of her face. What is your opinion, Hilda, for you seem to be very silent on the subject?"

"It's quite impossible that a girl in her position could ever have met Miss Ferrars or Mr. Wentworth," answered Hilda.

"Remembering the position he was in before he came to us, I think it very likely," shrewdly answered Mrs. Matherson.

"Then you don't think Mr. Wentworth an impostor, Mrs. Matherson?" asked her husband.

Before she could answer, Hilda replied: "I cannot answer that."

General Brittlebank, who had entered the room with Frank, interrupted all by saying to his wife:

"You can, Hilda, and you know it. I have ev[illegible] to hang him, and I'd do it, [illegible] aren't too good for such a wi[illegible]e face is that? No more doubt [illegible]

"Richard Gerson," cried Hilda in astonishment.

"You told me he had died at sea. You showed me what it took for proof, yet knew him to be living," said the General, accusingly.

"I believed him to be dead, as heaven hears and judges me," replied Hilda earnestly.

"Yet, knowing he lived, you would have let him rob the heir," said Brittlebank, sternly.

"He told me that Wentworth was dead," pleaded Hilda.

"What do you mean?" demanded Ruth.

"That your hopes of years have been rewarded—that the real Frank Wentworth lives," said General Brittlebank.

"Lives!" cried Ruth joyfully.

As soon as Frank could escape from the questioning of the police and assuring them that he could always be found if wanted, he hastended to the hotel. He entered the room as Ruth cried out his name. Crossing the room he took her in his arms, kissing her tenderly after a long embrace.

"Ruth! Ruth!" he cried. "Is it indeed your eyes that look into mine again? Oh! the cruel years that passed between us when I said that they will come."

"The day has come," she said. "It was a truth born in my heart as yours to live a lifelong falsity."

"There, didn't I always say so?" interrupted Mr. Matherson.

"I have shined and suffered. Why can't I die?" Why can't I die?" moaned Mrs. Brittlebank, sitting in a chair.

General's Wife Forgiven

"No, you were more shined against than sinning. It will not be a hand of mine that will cast a stone at you while life beats in the heart of Hiram Brittlebank," said the General, and he leaned over her with a little caress.

Ruth, turning tenderly to Frank said: "Frank, you have come back to me."

"From the world of death to the world of life! My darling!"

Fudge, who had crept to his side, said: "Ah, master, do you remember saying ones when you was weak and ill with fever that you and me would never make much good in life, and I said there aren't much harm in tryin'—no more there was, master, no more there was, for you has found her as you loved, and I have found what I have never known, a father's love."

Years have passed since the days of the trials of Frank Wentworth and Fudge, the waif of Park row. Richard Gerson, fearing the disgrace of death in the chair, ended his life as the police broke into the room in which he was hiding. Fudge is rapidly growing into womanhood. Her Winters are spent in school. In the Summer she goes abroad with General Brittlebank and his wife. There is not a happier couple in New York than the old general and his wife, who passed through so many trials before they reached the haven of contentment.

Ruth and Frank are married and are living in the Westchester home that was bequeathed to them jointly. Among the most cherished friends are Mr. and Mrs. Matherson, who still squabble and love as in the old days when the lives of Ruth and Frank, with their little friend Fudge, contained more shadows than sunshine.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I HAVE a grate treet in store for you & littel Bobbie, sed Pa to Ma last nite. There is a old soldier coming up to the house for dinner that was with Napoleon in the Russhun campane. He was a general in the Grand Armee, & he had one of his ears frose almost off on the retreet from Moscow.

Well, well, sed Ma, what a treet that will be, to be sure. How does his other ear look?

Oh, he is a fine looking old man, all rite, sed Pa. His hair is as white as snow. I met him at a banquet & we got to be pritty good frends. After the banquet he told me kind of confidenshul all about that campane, which ended in one of the greatest tragedys of the world, Pa sed.

It seems to me that was a long time ago, that retreet from Moscow, sed Ma. I can't quite believe that there are any of its survivirs arriving, Ma sed. Maybe you & jure frend was doing sum treating & retreating yurselfs & it calm to him on that account.

Just then Pa's frend calm. He was a nice looking old man, all rite, but he dident look over a hundred or so & after Pa had took him into the library he calm out & dident act a bit stiff.

At the dinner tabel Ma wanted to talk about sumthing that was interesting to Pa's frend, so she sed Well, how was everything in Moscow when you left it?

Pritty well burned down, sed Pa's frend. In fack, there wasent much of anything left to it. You see, the Russhuns knew that Nap & me was going to be there for the Winter if we could use it for our Winter quarters, so they burned it down & there he was, left flat.

Of course, sed Pa's frend, I blame Nap a whole lot, for the pole old scout is dead & gone & I shudent say it, but I told him the minnit we entered Moscow that we ought to turn rite around & hike back becfore Winter set in. But Nap was always kind of hedstrong & he culdent see it that way. He ordered his Grand Armee to stay there & wait for the Russhuns to cum back, & they waited a lot of time & the weather was nice & warm for people that shud have had cold feet. That wud have been the time to beat it back to that dear France, sed Pa's frend.

Well, to mafk a long story short, sed the old general, Winter set in & as you know, the rest is history. We had to eat frozen horse flesh when we cuddent git anything else—frozen horse flesh & beet roots & snowballs. I have shook & shuddered since then every time I see a snowball. I ate enuff snowballs on that awful retreet to make a big cold blooded as a wall-eyed pike. Oh, the horrors of that march—the horrors of that march!

Then Pa's frend started in to eat his dinner & he ate as much as a horse's horse. Everything that Ma had on the tabel went so fast that Ma had to git up & git more. I suppose it tasted so much better than the horse flesh & beet roots & snowballs that he kind of appreshiated it.

Well, sed Pa, after he had went, what do you think of that gallant old soldier?

He is a gallant old eater, I cesst he, sed Ma, a gallant old fibber. I like to listen to a good yarn teller, sed Ma, but wen a man wants to tell me stories why does he always have to pick you out?

EXPECT WAR TO BE RESUMED BY SUNDAY NOON

ATHENS, Feb. 1.—One hundred and twenty rapid fire guns and 1,400 tons of ammunition reached Salonika today from Marseilles, consigned to the Greek forces stationed in the city.

Official opinion here is that fighting will be resumed next week both at Adrianople and Tchatalja, unless the European powers on the same unexpected step within the next twenty-four hours.

French Warship Sails for Turkey.

TOULON, Feb. 1.—It was learned here today that the French cruiser Victor Hugo, which sailed last night for Constantinople, carried an extra quota of heavy ammunition as well as a full complement of marines. This indicates that the French government believes that the situation in the Turkish capital is critical.

Peace Envoys Fear Another War.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—While reports were coming in today that fighting had broken out between the Bulgarian and Turkish armies both opposite Adrianople and other along the Tchatalja fortifications outside of Constantinople, a number of the peace envoys left London with the most pessimistic declarations upon their lips.

G. Noradounghian, who headed the Servian delegation, said that he looked upon a renewal of hostilities as inevitable. "We have tried our best to avoid another war-fare, but the Turks have brought about a situation wherein we can see nothing but a resumption of hostilities," said Mr. Noradounghian.

Ismail Kemali Pasha, one of the Ottoman peace envoys, said that he feared war would be resumed Tuesday in spite of any steps which the Powers might take. "More blood will flow unnecessarily and all the responsibility will rest upon the allies," declared the diplomat.

Heavy shipments of ammunition into the Balkans are reported, which makes it plain that the allies are preparing for a long field campaign. A Sofia dispatch stated that Czar Ferdinand and the Bulgarian general staff have agreed upon a campaign in which two lines will be struck simultaneously, one at Adrianople and the other at the Tchatalja works. Part of the Servian army in Macedonia will begin the campaign in Epirus, Albania and Macedonia.

5 SURVIVORS OF WRECK HERE ON SAXONIA

Harold V. Perry of Malden, engineer of the Boston schooner Furuce, which was wrecked off Cape Hatteras, with the captain and two of the crew drowned, reached Boston today on the Canadian Saxonia.

Still weak from his terrible experiences, Perry was overcome at the pier and fell into the arms of a brother who was on the dock to meet him. Later he told the story of the wreck.

Four negro firemen of the crew who survived with Perry also came on the Saxonia. Perry said:

"When we started from Tampa for Washington with a heavy deckload of lumber the vessel was leaking badly. The storm struck us on the afternoon of Thursday, January 2, and the vessel's seams widened. The pumps were just able to cope with the incoming water.

"The evening about nine o'clock, when all of us were huddled together on the poop deck, the ship was suddenly thrown on her beam ends and every man was spilled into the sea.

"From that moment I saw nothing more of Captain Larkin and mate Schaffer.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock markets closed irregular today in New York prices ruled a shade lower than they did at the close of yesterday. American Can continued the most active stock and declined in early trading. It made a partial recovery in the last hour and finished half a point lower than at the close on Friday. Trading in New York was comparatively active for Saturday, share transactions totalling around 175,000.

Left upon the price range was narrow. The market was fairly active at the start with Superior & Boston prominent. One report is that it was bought by old Boston interests. There was considerable business in American Telephone rights. There was not much movement in copper issues.

Alaska Gold was the feature on the local curb, it rising above 15.

The New York bank statement shows in brief: Excess cash reserve $23,850,000; increased $508,600; loans increased $12,039,000; specie increased $1,418,000; legals decreased $1,057,000; deposits increased $2,262,000; circulation decreased $161,000.

January copper exports amounted to 24,639 tons, a decrease of 4,305, compared with 1911 figures for that month.

New York Prices Lower

Prices declined in the New York market this morning after a quiet opening. American Can was fractionally weaker at the start and lost a point and a half in a few minutes. Pennsylvania was one of the most active issues on the list at the beginning of trading. After opening unchanged at 122¾, it sold down for a loss of 1%.

Among early declines were Amalgamated ¼, American Beet Sugar ¼, B. & O. 8/8, California Petroleum ¼, Canadian Pacific ¼, Colorado Fuel & Iron ¼, Consolidated Gas ¼, Woolworth opened ⅜ off, but made up its loss, Union Pacific sustained an initial loss of ⅛ and sold down later.

The Curb was steady.

Americans in London were quiet.

American Can Financing.

Plans for paying the back dividends on the preferred stock of the American Can Company were announced yesterday, directors having held a special meeting at the offices of the Rock Island company and authorized the issue of $15,000,000 fifteen-year 5 per cent. debenture bonds.

Of this total, $14,000,000 have been sold to the Guaranty Trust Company and Lee, Higginson & Co., of Boston. The balance of $1,000,000 will remain in the company's treasury. The bonds are redeemable at 102½ and interest, with a sinking fund of $500,000 annually.

No action was taken regarding the actual payment of the 22½ per cent. back dividends, but this matter is expected to be settled at a meeting of the directors on Tuesday next, following the annual meeting of stockholders.

Price of Copper Metal.

Concerning recent transactions in copper metal and current prices for the same, it was said in New York today:

"Europe was in this market yesterday with a good demand for January copper. This was further accentuated by an improved demand from home consumers. It is considered doubtful if much was secured, however, at prices asked. At the same time offerings of March, April and May went begging, according to the refiners' agents who tried to sell.

"So far as can be ascertained there was but one agency asking 16⅛ cents—Amalgamated—while others were willing to do business at a considerably lower figure.

"It came to light that some March, April and May copper had been offered on the basis of 15.80 cash New York, but no buyers could be found for those deliveries. There have been some good sales for March, but they have not been well distributed. Beyond that month none of the consumers cares to buy at the moment."

Financial News in Brief.

The Charlestown Trust Company has declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. payable February 1, and have added $5,000 to the surplus.

Wiggin & Elwell, members of the New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, announce that Mr. J. Chester Hutchinson, who has been their office manager for the past three years, has become a partner in the firm.

The total operating revenue of Pennsylvania lines, East and West, for 1912 increased $26,896,911 and the net $6,690,000.

President James G. Cannon of the Fourth National Bank of New York says: "Manufacturers do not fear their business will be ruined, but believe the tariff revision will be conducted sanely with a view to disturbing business as little as possible."

For December the total operating income of the Boston & Maine increased $98,052 and for the last six months of 1912 the gain was $1,574,747.

The lower branch of the Michigan Legislature has passed a resolution to have the physical and financial condition of the Pere Marquette and its subsidiaries made a matter of investigation.

The Guggenheim Exploration Company earned 15⅝ per cent. on its capital stock during the year ended December 31 last, and added $240,454 to surplus.

PORT BOARD PLANS EAST BOSTON PIER

Plans for the iron, lumber and cotton pier, to be located at East Boston, are being prepared under the direction of the directors of the port of Boston, it became known today. The plans call for a pier between 1,000 and 1,200 feet long, and 125 feet and 150 feet wide.

This is the first step towards a comprehensive industrial development at East Boston.

Already the cotton mills owned by Governor Foss are located at that locality, and the General Electric Company is erecting a plant there, but in back of these properties there is a large undeveloped tract, which will, afford excellent opportunity for large business enterprises as soon as a transportation facilities have been provided.

SMASH ROYAL JEWEL CASE IN LONDON TOWER

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Suffragette violence in the last three days has cost the people of the British Islands $250,000, not counting the enormous drain upon the government for the prosecution of militant women and the added cost of safeguarding Cabinet officers, government buildings and the postal system. Together, it was estimated today, the militant women have run up a bill of $250,000.

To avoid detection many suffragettes today worked individually. One daring woman invaded the sacred precincts of the royal jewel house in the Tower of London, where the priceless jewels of the royal family and all the regalia used on state occasions are kept.

While the guards attention was distracted, the woman produced a hammer and smashed the glass case of a tiara, valuing a fortune in precious stones. It was thought at first the woman was a jewel thief, but she identified herself as a follower of Mrs. Pankhurst.

Early today a lone suffragette marched up to the Labor Exchange building and with her trusty hammer smashed nearly all the windows on the ground floor before police-men, attracted by the crash of glass, appeared.

At the same time other militants were diligently destroying the letters in mail boxes in this city and other cities throughout England. Despite the vigilance of the police women succeeded in pouring destructive acid into a dozen or more letter boxes, destroying the mail matter within.

As a result of the leak in the plans of the suffragettes to destroy cherished historical relics, including the Magna Charta, the action of English Home Secretary has placed soldiers at the doors of the museum.

Today is the Bridget's Day, a day of special meditation and intercession for the woman's suffragy movement at services to be held in Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and in various cathedrals, churches and chapels throughout Great Britain.

The royal palace of Kensington, Hampton, Kew and Holyrood were ordered closed to the public until further notice because of threats of the suffragettes to attack them. The public museums and similar institutions, it is reported, are also to be closed.

Today Is Dividend Day; Stockholders Get $27,000,000

Thousands of stockholders will today receive dividend checks from railroad and industrial corporations aggregating nearly $27,000,000.

One year ago less than $16,000,000 was disbursed. January 1 dividend payments totalled over $53,000,000, while a fortnight ago $20,078,543 was paid out.

The largest payment will be made by the Northern Pacific, $4,340,000.

5 NEAR DEATH AS BIG CHIMNEY IS BLOWN DOWN

Five lives were imperiled, a big steel pole sent hurtling through the side of a house, the office of the Suffolk County Brewery demolished, the neighborhood aroused and the firemen summoned when the seventy-five-foot chimney of the brewery at G and Eighth streets, South Boston, fell with a crash, blown over, it is believed, by the high wind. A trolley car, laden with passengers, proceeding along Eighth street, narrowly escaped being struck.

Above the crash there were myriad flashes as wire after wire, charged with electricity, came into contact with pieces of metal scattered about the yard.

William Martin, who lives at No. 150 G street, was asleep with his two children when the crash came. Hricks fell close to the building, and the pole supporting the trolley wires that was snapped off was thrown into his house.

James Murray, No. 13 Hiver avenue, and William Horan of Cambridge, were sitting on the steps of the brewery. They ran for their lives, jumping over wires and the street car rails charged with electricity.

The display of electricity gave the impression that a fire was raging. Someone rang an alarm from box 131. The firemen went in a veil for police reserves to keep the crowd back.

CASTRO FREE FOR WEEK, SEES SIGHTS OF NEW YORK TODAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—General Cipriano Castro, former president of Venezuela, who has been held at Ellis Island pending the settlement of whether or not he may land here, today found himself free to go anywhere he chose in New York.

Released under $500 bail, pending argument on a writ of habeas corpus, from his month of confinement at Ellis Island, Castro made for an up-town hotel.

"May George Washington's mantle descend upon us," said Castro in Spanish as his cab neared under the Washington arch.

General Castro's week of freedom was granted him by Judge Holt after it has been agreed to postpone argument on the writ. The document compels the government to show legal cause why Castro, who was ordered deported by Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, should not be admitted, it was said.

Justice has prevailed. I was looking for a real judge who would give me justice and at last I have found one.

Do You Underestimate Your Power?

Many Men Are Kept in Small Positions in This World Because They Underestimate Their Ability.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

Millions of men are born, grow up and die, leaving undone all the things they might have done, because they are controlled intellectually as a horse is controlled physically.

A majority of men believe that they cannot do a new thing. They believe that what always has been always MUST be.

The same old thing is done in the same old way, and millions upon millions of human beings live and die, all of them thinking that THAT IS THE ONLY WAY TO DO IT.

And then occasionally along comes a man who resists the pressure of the bit, the bridle of custom and habit upon his mind, who determines that he will not be held by any such flimsy power—and we have the real man, who does the real thing.

Napoleon crossed the Alps in the dead of Winter. When he was praised to the skies for his daring and genius, he said, most truly: "I deserve no credit except for refusing to believe those who said it could not be done."

That is an instance that we shall quote to you often, for it shows above everything else the particular quality that made a friendless, penniless, sickly Corsican lad the greatest ruler that the world has known, the greatest lawmaker, and a most useful man, in spite of the excesses and crimes to which his ambition drove him.

Custom had no hold on Napoleon. There was no bit in his mouth, no halter fastened around his intellectual machinery. He could always see the new thing and do it.

When his gunners were shooting at fleeing soldiers on the frozen lake, shooting at them from a height, Napoleon looked for a second at the scene and then gave the order to lower the guns and shoot at the ice.

The cannon balls broke the ice, the fleeing army sank into the water, to be drowned or rescued at the edge of the lake and made prisoners.

Lucky the man who can take a lesson intended for all and apply it TO HIMSELF.

Lucky the man also who can still keep trying, still struggling to free himself from the rut, even after years of disappointment.

Napoleon at one time contemplated suicide in his despair of ever getting ahead in the world.

After he had become Emperor a young officer complained that he (the young officer) had been a lieutenant in the army for five years and that there was no hope of advancement. Napoleon replied: "Truly, I was a lieutenant for more than five years, yet you see that I could arrive."

When they sent Napoleon to Italy, representing the French nation that had been brought to life and made to think by the splendid Revolution, the old Austrian generals felt only contempt for the lean, big-eyed young Corsican, leading soldiers, many of them ragged—and he himself tormented with the itch.

But those Austrian generals were held down by custom.

They did everything in the old way, AND NAPOLEON DID EVERYTHING IN THE NEW WAY—HIS OWN WAY.

When a battle was carried on along the banks of a river the Austrians followed the old plan, which was looked upon as sacred and unchangeable. They put one-half of their army on one side of the river and the other half of their army on the other side of the river, marching up and down, ready to meet Napoleon and beat him—as they supposed—no matter which side of the river he might choose.

Napoleon, free from custom, thinking for himself, kept his whole army together. He would take his WHOLE army along one side of the river, thrash one-half of the Austrian army, then cross the river and thrash the other half of the army; and those old generals, held by the halter of custom, scarcely knew what had happened to them before the Corsican boy had beaten them thoroughly and was well on the way to make himself Emperor of France and practical ruler of the world.

We cannot all be Napoleons. There is room for only one Napoleon at a time, and he must be made by circumstances and by other men.

But we all of us can take time, an hour or two on a quiet Sunday, to ask ourselves WHAT THE MATTER IS WITH US, WHAT BIT OR HALTER IS HOLDING US DOWN, KEEPING US BACK.

Do not imagine that it is necessary in order to succeed TO GIVE UP WHAT YOU ARE DOING NOW.

Success can be made AT ANYTHING.

Napoleon didn't have to get out of the army, in which he was moving so slowly, in order to find his success.

Newton, the greatest mathematical genius produced by the human race, did not have to give up his little employment with the government in order to carry on his extraordinary work.

In every field THERE IS OPPORTUNITY. The clerk in a department store can develop himself RIGHT WHERE HE IS, as well as anywhere else in the world, and perhaps better.

He sees human nature in all of its phases. Opportunity is before him, if he will take it. But he mustn't imagine that because OTHERS remain clerks he is bound to remain a clerk.

And he mustn't feel that because other clerks are careful not to work too much he SHOULD NOT WORK TOO MUCH.

Once you can get a bit into a horse's mouth or a halter on the horse's head, you can do almost anything you like with him. And once the bit of custom or the halter of fixed opinion holds a man, you can do pretty much anything you like with HIM.

For yourself, make up your mind that you will keep your head free—no halter or bit with a string for any man to hold.

Realize that freedom is opportunity, and opportunity is life.

Home and Mother of Today—Domestic Misery Is Due to Old Adam and Eve Causes, Not to the Woman's Rights Movement

By DOROTHY DIX

CONGRESSMAN STANLEY E. BOWDLE of Cincinnati, who defeated Nicholas Longworth, ex-President Roosevelt's son-in-law, for Congress, has been expressing himself on the woman question to this tune:

"I am the apostle of the old man, mere man, tyrannical man. Of the old man who brings home the rent, who eats out of a kettle at noon, and fills it with kindling to carry home at night. Of the old man who wrestles with the payment of the insurance and struggles with the first, second or chattel mortgage. Of the old duffer who created a condition of refuge where a woman and her private fortune are immune even from its creditors who have furnished her with the food she eats and the Paris clothes she wears.

"Oh, yes, the home is great, and women are great, and our homes were greater in former days—the days of our mothers, when there was no clamor for the ballot. The home today is not so great as it was in former days. The deplorable state of our homes is the doleful, sociological fact of the feverish question of the hour, the craze for suffrage."

The "apostle of the old man" seems to be also the apostle of the dodo, for the man who eats out of his bucket at noon, and brings it home full of kindling, is about as extinct as the mythological bird.

Halcyon Days of Protected Femininity Are Passed

Also, it may be remarked in passing, that the halcyon state of affairs, from a feminine standpoint, where men "created a condition of refuge where a woman and her private fortune were immune from even the creditors who had furnished her with food and Paris clothes," and eke from her husband, does not exist, as every woman will testify who has a little money of her own.

The one interesting thing, however, in Congressman Bowdle's diatribe on women is his assertion that our homes were greater in former days, the days of our mothers, and that the deplorable state of the home at present is the result of the craze for suffrage.

The answer to this assertion is that there's nothing the matter with the home of today, nor the mothers of today. The people who talk about how superior things were in the times of our grandparents, belong to the has-been class who are forever telling us how much better the tallow candles and the stage coach were than electric lights and the automobile are.

Our grandmothers and our mothers were good women and good mothers, and did the best they could for their homes and children according to the lights they had, but they didn't know the first thing about housekeeping, nor child-rearing, according to modern standards. And they didn't put in a tithe of the thought or intelligence on the proposition of making a home or bringing up their children that their granddaughters do.

We are forever hearing about how the women of the past devoted themselves to their children, and how the women of today neglect theirs. But did you ever go to some old country churchyard and look at the lines of little graves in every family plot? You will see four—five—six, sometimes more of these heart-breaking little mounds, showing how the babies died through their mothers' lack of care of them. You will not see anything like that in a modern cemetery, and the reason for it is the unceasing care, the sterilization of the milk, the work and watchfulness that the mother of today gives to her babies, and that enables her to raise even a delicate child.

Mother of Today Brings All Her Intelligence to Care of Children

The mothers of the past felt that they had done their full duty by their children if they fed them and clothed them, and kissed them, when they were good, and spanked them when they were bad. The mother of the present belongs to Mothers' Clubs, and Child Study Clubs, and brings every particle of intelligence she has got to bear on doing the best she can for her offspring. Instead of neglecting her duties as a mother, she overdoes it.

As for the housekeeping, not one of us but would be horrified at our grandmothers' slipshod way of doing things, at her lack of knowledge of food values and sanitation, and her wasteful extravagance in throwing things away. Grandma's housekeeping would bankrupt any man of today, and give him chronic dyspepsia to boot.

Taking things by and large, homes were never so well managed, nor children so intelligently and conscientiously cared for as they are today, and it's about time to stop talking about the terrible conditions of domestic life, for there isn't a word of truth in it.

People like this Rip Van Winkle Congressman seem to hold it against the modern woman that she no longer spins and weaves, but buys ready made cloth from the factory. With equal justice they might criticise the farmer because he no longer plows with a crooked stick, but uses a highly ingenious machine run by electricity. And, anyway, it was men who invented the loom and the spinning jenny, and started the canning factory. Blame them, if you want to blame anybody for woman forsaking her ancient industries.

Ratio of Divorce Low in States Where Women Have Franchise

Nor are women responsible for the high cost of living. It was Mister Armour and Mister Swift, and not Mrs. who organized the Beef Trust, and it was men politicians and not suffragettes who made it possible to do so.

The contention that the "deplorable state of our homes is due to the doleful sociological fact of the craze for suffrage" is too laughable to be seriously discussed.

Domestic misery there is in plenty, but it comes from the old Adam and Eve causes, not from the new woman's rights movement.

Indeed, the ratio of divorce is particularly low in the countries and States where women have the franchise, which shows that the right to vote has no more effect on a woman's affections than it has on a man's, and that love and not politics rules the hearthstone.

The women of Ohio came very near to getting the right to vote last Fall. They will vote before Congressman Bowdle's term of office is up. It will be interesting to notice whether he will then hold such rabid views upon the decadence of the home and the "doleful sociological subject of woman suffrage."
